Another Hand Cut Off Mr. Borah and Mr. Fish $900,000,000 More A Woman to Hang

Wynant D. Hubbard, Universal Service correspondent, writing from Dessye, Ethiopia, describes Emperor Haile Selassie, somewhere near the front.

"He inspected the American Seventh Day Adventist Mission, and without batting an eyelash, the Emperor watched an operation on a thief, one of whose hands was cut off by the thief's victim."

Cutting off the hand that stole from him must have been pleasant for the man robbed, but a "civilized Ethiopian Emperor" calmly looking on must have surprised the Seventh Day missionaries.

There is a prospect of agreement concerning Ethiopia. England wants no fight, especially without France to keep her company and supply men. France would NOT fight, if it were possible to avoid it. Correspondents, well informed, expect some sort of settlement. You notice that, while our government rushes in where nothing concerns it, to prevent oil exports to Italy, the League of Nations has not yet enforced the oil embargo. "What will Mussolini do?" That question disturbs European nations. They would be more disturbed, perhaps, if Mussolini were to answer that question, with deeds.

The English King did not read his own speech from the throne today because of his elderly maiden sister's death. The speech was read for him and he declared that "gaps" in Britain's national defense must be filled in.

It is expected that three hundred million dollars of money now to be borrowed will be spent on those "gaps." The rest of the money will pay off other bonds.

Senator Borah, of Idaho, and Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, had a long talk and reporters "guess" that Senator Borah and Mr. Fish have agreed to run side by side —Senator Borah for President, Mr. Fish for Vice-President. It is not safe to "guess" about Senator Borah, but it would be wise for the Republicans to decide soon. Uncertainty does not make votes.

Uncle Sam borrows nine hundred million dollars more, bringing the national debt above thirty thousand five hundred million dollars, but forty thousand millions below the amount that certain "great bankers" told President Roosevelt this country could easily carry.

Congressman Hamilton Fish, Jr., wants President Roosevelt to tell who the great bankers were, but it is understood that they talked in confidence.

England, also, borrows money, asking one loan of about one billion and a half dollars and another of five hundred million dollars. These bonds will be "readily absorbed." A nation doesn't know how rich it is, until it begins borrowing.

Whatever the League of Nations and our State Department may think of Mussolini, George Bernard Shaw considers the Italian ruler a man of sound judgment.

Resenting England's attitude toward his country, Mussolini has forbidden the sale in Italy of books written by any Englishman except William Shakespeare and George Bernard Shaw.

Those books would supply a good education in English, even without the books of George Bernard Shaw.

At Woodstock, Ontario, Mrs. Elizabeth Tilford, mother of nine children, Salvation Army girl and choir singer, waiting to be hanged for killing her husband with poison, says she did not kill the man. The jury says she did and she must hang. As is usual, Mrs. Tilford is writing her "life story" in jail.

She interrupts her writing to tell the reporter:

"I pray for clemency, but if I must die, I shall not complain. Life has been pleasant."

The Pan American Airways Clipper Ship, on its return trip across the Pacific ocean, flew from Manila to Guam in 14 hours, and is now somewhere between Guam and Wake Island—a fine achievement.

Will Germany, England, or the United States establish the first regular mail and passenger service across the Atlantic? It ought to be the United States, since this country invented the heavier-than-air flying machine and will supply the traffic for the line.

Guns and Gas Cow Convict In Escape Attempt

1 Dying, 3 Beaten in Battle for Liberty; Convicts Ram Down Gate With Truck

Half blinded with tear gas and the worse for rough handling, here is Frank "Turkey Joyce" Moriarty of Roxbury in the grip of police who are hustling him back to state prison after his bold attempt to escape had ingloriously failed with his capture in the Boston & Maine railroad yards. Moriarty was one of two convicts actually to get beyond the prison walls. The other, William P. "Red" McManus, was wounded by police bullets and taken to the prison hospital under heavy guard. 4 IN DARING ESCAPE TAKEN AT GUNPOINT

(Other Pictures, Stories on Pages 2, 3 and 8)

In a desperate but vain attempt by five convicts to gain their freedom, one of the convicts and a civilian truck driver were killed at Charlestown State Prison today.

One other fugitive was shot four times and badly gassed. Another was gassed but escaped bullets.

The remaining two convicts were captured at gunpoint as they were attempting to steal a potato truck in the Boston & Maine freight yards.

The dead:

LEWIS RICHARDS, 27, of Waterhouse street, West Somerville, truck driver.

PHILIP NAPLES, 32, of Worcester, former "Worcester Public Enemy No. 1," who was received at the prison only a month ago.

The injured:

The desperate bid for freedom occurred in mid-morning and threw the area around the prison into excitement for nearly an hour.

Inside the prison yard, near the gate leading out to a road beside the railroad freight yards at its rear, a truck, driven by Richards, was about to depart the prison.

DASH FOR TRUCK

This truck, connected with the prison foundry, and as the driver started for the gate, another truck was approaching the gate from outside, to load registration plates.

At the gates stood McDonald, the trusty, and as the gates began to open the five convicts, Naples, McManus, Frank Moriarty of Rox-

Home-Made Pistol Kills Vermont Boy

The boy died in a hospital in Burlington of a bullet wound in the abdomen suffered Nov. 23. The bullet was discharged as he was digging it from the barrel of the toy pistol, which he had bored to take a .32-caliber cartridge.

STATE REJECTS OATHS OF 24

Twenty-four teachers' oaths today were returned by Commissioner of Education Payson Smith to five Massachusetts institutions with orders they be filled out properly and returned.

Three were from Harvard, five from Boston University, eight from Mt. Hermon school, seven from Andover-Newton Theological Seminary and one from the Episcopalian Theological school.

Commissioner Smith announced the 24 oaths had not been satisfactory and had been returned, but he would not say by which instructors or professors they had been signed.

A drive to put teeth into the teachers' oath bill and provide heavy fines or jail terms for educators who defy the new state law was started today.

COTTON FIGHT IN HIGH COURT

Washington, Dec. 3 (INS)—Characterizing the Bankhead cotton law as "revolutionary," counsel for Lee Moor, Clint, Tex., cotton farmer, today filed a brief in the Supreme Court assailing the law as unconstitutional.

The case, the first brought to the high court involving the Bankhead law, is slated for argument next week.

"We doubt if any legislation has ever before been adopted by Congress as sweeping, as radical, as revolutionary and as contrary to all American ideals, as the Bankhead act," said the brief.

PLEA FOR GLORIA IS DENIED

Albany, Dec. 3 (INS)—The court of appeals today denied the request of Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt for permission to appeal from a lower court decision granting custody of her nine-year-old daughter Gloria, to the latter's paternal aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney.

The state's highest court counsel ite refusal in one sentence, stating:

"Motion for leave to appeal denied with $10 costs and necessary printing disbursements."

Permissoin to appeal was necessary because the appellate division had unanimously upheld the Supreme Court decision.

Unless Mrs. Vanderbilt finds some way of appealing to the United States Supreme Court, the decision today means that the child, said to be heiress to a $4,000,000 fortune, will remain under the care and guardianship of her aunt,

2 KILLED IN CHARLESTOWN PRISON ESCAPE BATTLE

CONVICTS BEAT MAN TO DEATH, RAM GATES

One of the convicts took the wheel and headed the 10-ton truck at full speed for the outer gate, splintering it and showering all five with debris. Inside the cab, Richards, meanwhile, was being beaten.

At the gate their first setback came. As the heavy truck tore through the gate, it crashed headon into the truck driven by Richards.

According to guards atop the prison walls, Naples and McManus carried 28-inch steel bars as they rode through the gate.

Their truck halted by the crash, the five convicts leaped to the ground and set upon Richards; McDonald, who was at the gate, and Guards Shaughnessy and O'Donnell, who were stationed outside.

GUARDS OPEN FIRE

Before they fell beneath the slugings of the convicts, Shaughnessy and O'Donnell blew their alarm whistles. The prison siren suddenly split the atmosphere with its warning.

From the walls the guards began firing. McManus and Moriarty broke out of the melee, run a few feet across to a board fence outside the walls, scaled it and were gone. But McManus had been hit.

Naples was shot dead in his tracks as he attempted to follow the other two over the fence.

McArdle and O'Brien were more successful. They gained the fence, dropped on the other side and scuttled into the railroad yards.

POLICE SWARM TO PRISON

Police details were dispatched from all downtown stations and from stations as far away as Mattapan, the men racing to Charlestown in cruiser cars, and some of them, on house duty, using their own machines.

From police headquarters, Superintendent Martin H. King and the crew of the ammunition wagon staged a race to the prison.

In the ammunition wagon, called by police the "gup wagon," Sergeant Edward Saboli, police armorer and ballistics expert, keeps always an emergency supply of machine and riot guns, pistols, revolvers, tear gas bombs and demolition bombs.

When the headquarters men arrived, Charlestown officers and the railroad police were already out with the prison guards in the railroad yard hunt.

BEDLAM AT PRISON

Shots were whistling across the area, shouts of officers advising the fugitives to surrender echoed, whistles of locomotives were blowing the alarm, and police cars were roaring in fast trips along the boundary roads to keep the fugitives trapped.

In front of a potato storehouse, two trucks were standing. William Mahoney, 23, of 65 Baldwin avenue, Everett, was in the cab of one.

KNOCKS OUT CONVICT

Just then Jack Cart, 27, potato dealer at 3 Front street, Charlestown, came running to Mahoney's aid. Cart, who is married and lives in Brookline, swung one punch from his knees and it landed on O'Brien's jaw. The convict crumpled to the ground.

McArdle turned to flee alone—and ran almost against the muzzle of a revolver held by Lieutenant Thomas F. Devine of the Boston & Maine police.

The railroad lieutenant had just alighted from his car to investigate a theft report at the potato house when he sighted the tableau at the truck and recognized the prison garb of the convicts.

At gunpoint, Lieutenant Devine took the two convicts captive and turned them over to the prison.

REFUSE TO SURRENDER

Meanwhile, McManus and Moriarty, hotly-pressed, had taken refuge beneath Storage House No. 10 in the freight yards and refused all orders of police to come out and surrender.

Police brought tear gas bombs and hurled them beneath the storehouse. Choking fumes spread over the area, causing the officers themselves to cough and weep and even catching Superintendent King unawares.

Within a few minutes, Moriarty came crawling into view, stood up and raised his hands. Police leveled guns at him, but Deputy Police Superintendent John M. Anderson shouted a warning not to shoot. Moriarty was taken prisoner.

SHOT BRANDISHING KNIFE

In another couple of minutes, McManus, coughing and blinking, crawled out, but as he stood up a knife gleamed in his hand. Some officer fired one shot and McManus crumpled to the ground.

He was taken to the prison hospital and all five of the escaped convicts had been accounted for.

McManus, however, was found to have been shot four other times. He had one bullet in his leg and a total of four in his abdomen. Doctors said this afternoon he may not recover.

While the hunt outside the walls was going on, firemen who responded to the alarm were stationed inside the prison, with hoselines attached, ready to battle any fire the other convicts might set in the excitement. There was no fire, however.

In first confused reports of the escape, Police Superintendent King, in a radio conversation with Commissioner McSweeney, included the name of John Oliver as one of the escaped convicts and said Oliver had been killed.

Later, however, it was found that Oliver did not take part in the break.

(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

To guard this prison gate, broken open by escaping convicts who splintered it with a motor truck used as a battering ram, police reinforcements are rushing to guard against possibility of further disorder inside the Charlestown institution's walls. These armed officers were among the first on the scene after a general alarm had called details from every station in the city. On hand, also, are firemen, ready to battle incendiary blazes. The gate is situated under Prison Point bridge between the prison yard and the Boston & Maine railroad yards.

5 Prison Flareups In State

The break for freedom from State prison at Charlestown by five convicts was the fifth recent flareup among prisoners in Massachusetts penal institutions.

Last Sunday night, in a riot at Deer Island House of Correction, two inmates were stabbed. Julian Bracie, 40, a Negro inmate, was wounded by an unidentified assailant and then he himself ran amuck with a knife, cutting Giacomo Cucchinelli, 30, of East Boston, on the face.

Search of the institution uncovered only the weapon alleged to have been wielded by Bracie. It had been stolen from the kitchen, officials said, and had been filed down to look like a dagger.

Bracie is in a serious condition at Boston City Hospital. Six stitches closed the face wound of Cucchinelli, who was treated at Deer Island dispensary.

Last Friday two inmates of Deer Island House of Correction made a daring attempt to escape, but were captured following a fusillade by guards. They were Neil Uhlman, 18, of Revere, and Leo Delage, 28, of the South End, who fled after Delage had lured John A. Norton, guard, into his cell, beat him into unconsciousness and stripped him of his keys. Delage then freed Uhlman. The pair were halted on the Winthrop shore.

The same pair staged a daring getaway from Deer Island November 2, under cover of a heavy fog, and were captured the following day near the Canadian border.

Stiff State Prison sentences were meted out October 16 last to five youths who staged an unsuccessful attempt October 5 to escape from Concord Reformatory, during which John H. Denton, guard, was shot with one of several guns made within the prison.

John Karoliszyn, 19, of 95 Stearns avenue, Lawrence, who was alleged to have made the guns, was sentenced to eight to ten years by Judge Nelson P. Brown in Middlesex Superior Criminal Court.

Henryr Barboni, 21, of 15 Cedar avenue, Revere, was sentenced to seven to nine years; Claude Glenn, 21, 38 Spring street, Paterson, N. J., was sentenced to seven to nine years; John Roach, 20, of 285 Benson street, Brighton, was sentenced to seven to nine years and George Grondine, 19, of 29 Eliot street, Lowell, was given seven to eight years. All these sentences were to state prison.

For alleged gross neglect of duty Superintendent Michael J. Dee of the reformatory suspended Thomas E. Filing and John E. Wetherbee, guards, and John P. Allen, senior correction officer, for 60 days each, in connection with the attempted escape.

In his report to Commissioner Arthur T. Lyman, Dee said failure of the three men to spread an alarm constituted the alleged neglect of duty.

Technology Concert

BUREAUCRACY AND TAXES

"The suppression of unnecessary offices, of useless establishments and expenses, enabled us to discontinue our internal taxes. These, covering our land with officers and opening our doors to their intrusions, had already begun that process of domiciliary vexation which, once entered, is scarcely to be restrained from reaching successively every article of property and produce."

—THOMAS JEFFERSON, second inaugural address, March 4, 1805.

KNEELS BY KILLERS

Priest Absolves Sins of Convicts

By ARTHUR J. QUINN

Not all carried guns.

There was a drum of firing from along the railroad tracks behind the prison. There was a rattle of shots outside the gate.

Sirens wailed all up and down the street. Police poured from squad cars outside the walls, unslinging machine-guns and rifles, swinging side arms.

A man lay dead in the prison yard. Another, cut down by bullets as he attempted to scale a fence, hung there like a limp scarecrow. A third sprawled beside the tracks.

Warden Lannigan saw what he saw and he turned to a guard.

"Get Father Farrell," he said.

The sirens wailed again and there were more firing and shouts; there was a beldam outside the prison and inside the prison, and police cars continued to pour out heavily armed reserves.

A black car came along the street, without a siren but with a policeman clinging to the running board. It swung up over the sidewalk to get by the jam of police cars, screeched to a halt outside the gate.

Rev. Ralph W. Farrell, rosy-cheeked chaplain of the prison, climbed out. The police lines opened for him and he went through the gate.

Sacrament and stole, he carried instead of a gun.

Lewis Richards, truck driver, lay on the ground in the yard, his head bashed in. The priest kneeled beside him, administered conditional absolution.

The scarecrow had been plucked off the fence, carried to the prison hospital, laid on the floor. The priest went to him, kneeled there, gave him conditional absolution. He was the convict, Naples, also dead.

Then they carried Red McManus in from the railroad tracks. He had four bullet holes in him, but he was conscious.

"Are you a Catholic?" Father Farrell asked.

"Yes, father, I am."

He had difficulty saying anything. There were long pauses between the words.

"I'm sorry," he continued, "for what I did. I guess I need you more than anybody else."

So McManus received absolution and the last rites. He was suffering so he could not receive communion.

"Where did Richards live?" the priest asked.

They told him; on Waterhouse street, Somerville.

"Well," he said, "I'll be going there now."

He went out to the gate and climbed in his car and started away. The police cars were still arriving, discharging the uniformed men with the guns.

WORCESTER NO. 1 ENEMY SLAIN

Philip Naples, 32, who was killed in today's Charlestown prison escape plot, was considered Public Enemy No. 1 in Worcester.

He was convicted November 7, 1935, of robbing (with three others still at large) the Worcester County Institute for Savings of $14,000.

Captured in New York city, he was finally extradited and sentenced to serve a 16-to-20-year sentence in State prison.

During the proceedings it was learned that if he'ever finished his sentence here he would have been returned to New York State, where he had an unfinished term of 10 to 13 years to serve.

He was listed on New York police records as a parole violator.

Among his many aliases were Napoli, Watson and the name Naples under which he was usually booked. His real name was Napolitano.

Funeral Planned

Funeral arrangements are to be completed today for John P. Brown, 60, of Humphreys street, Roxbury, who died of a heart attack after hailing his auto for a red traffic light in Tremont street.

Don't tell-but here's a letter I got from a married lady!

Dear Sandy:
Your Ten Payment Plan has been a life-saver! Without it I don't know how my husband could have bought that much-needed suit and overcoat. Food and everything costs so much more these days that he just couldn't pay for new clothes all in one lump. But spreading the payments to fit our weekly budget makes it easy.
I used to have little pangs of conscience when I bought a lot of new things, and Jim had to wait. But that's all over now—thanks so your grand service!
Yours very truly,
(A HOUSEWIFE)

'TURKEY' JOYCE TELLS CAPTURE IN RAILROAD YARDS

These Everett police officers are searching a truck on the Alford street bridge, Everett, to prevent possible escape of convicts who broke out of the state prison at Charlestown today. Before word was flashed that the fugitives had been captured in the Boston & Maine railroad yards, Charlestown, a tight police cordon was thrown all about the city, cutting off every avenue of egress from the prison area.

Fled Hail of Bullets, Convict Pal Shot

By FRANCIS P. O'NEILL

Captured under a potato shed by a Boston police squad headed by Superintendent Martin H. King and Deputy Superintendent John M. Anderson, Frank Moriarty, alias "Turkey" Joyce, 21-year-old desperado, told the writer in a police car carrying him back to state's prison:

"Thank God—I wasn't shot. Though I'm done for—I suppose. It took quite a bunch of you guys to get me, at that.

"When we made the break we weren't afraid of the guards at the jail hitting us with any slugs.

"They couldn't hit the rear end of a barn door. But you Boston coppers—that's something different.

"Poor old 'Red' (McManus). I guess they got him for keeps.

"When we got clear I ran down the railroad tracks toward the North Station and who turns up but my pal, 'Red.' 'Red' says: 'I think we're going to make the grade.'

Shots Come Faster

"After I had run about 200 yards the shots began to come faster.

"Then I ducked under a freight car—an outbound train happened to be coming out.

"It was so close to me the fireman waved at me to get away. I guess he didn't know I was an escaping prisoner but luck was still with me and I ducked around the train."

At this point Moriarty wiped his streaming face with his sleeve as he sat in the rear seat of the car between Sergeant Thomas Friel and Detective Lawrence O'Connor. I was in the front seat.

Less than five minutes before, the slim, brown-haired young convict had been hauled out from under Potato Shed No. 10 by the heels.

Toss Tear Gas

Superintendent of Police King and his squad had tossed tear gas bombs under the shed before Friel, O'Connor, Sergeant William Barrow of headquarters and Deputy Superintendent John Anderson went under the shed to pull Moriarty out.

"Much to my surprise," said Moriarty, resuming his jerky account of the prison break, "I ran right into 'Red' as I came around the freight train.

"I said: 'Well, we're in a helluva mess now, Red.' In front of us was the drawbridge near North Station. The other way was the town—Charlestown—and I seen that if we run that way we'd come right out on Nashua street.

"So I ducks for Potato Shed 10 and Red dives under Shed 11.

"A few minutes later I hear 'Red' groaning under the shed. He says, 'They got me, "Turkey" —you're on your own. I'm done for—they got me four times.'"

Moriarty broke off long enough to ask his captors:

"Is he dead—did you knock 'Red' off?"

He was told McManus, the 27-year-old robber, was in Haymarket Relief Hospital with wounds that may prove fatal.

"Gee—that's tough. Though I s'pose I'm done for, too.

"I can see now where I made one bad mistake. After they pulled 'Red' out I didn't hear any noise for a few minutes so I crept out on my hands and knees just as Superintendent King and the rest of you guys came up the track with all those shot-guns. I ducked back under, but you saw me.

"Then the tear-gas starts to come in under and I tried to dig in under a pile of dirt. No good. Thank the Lord I wasn't shot, though."

At this moment, the writer leaning over the front seat of the police cruiser car, started to hand Moriarty a handkerchief to wipe his eyes, still streaming from effects of the tear gas.

Instead the slim desperado made a dive for the riot gun Sergeant Thomas Friel was holding between his knees. Friel was too quick and knocked the prisoner's hand aside, while Detective "Larry" O'Connor, on the other side of the captured prisoner, slammed him back in the seat and held him there. Moriarty gasped:

"Nearly got you that time. If I got that gun I'd use it—what the hell have I got to lose now."

He was shackled in a moment and the rest of the ride to the State Prison was finished with no further talk from the trapped jailbreak leader. He was hustled inside the gate.

"I suppose I get the bang now" he called back over his shoulder.

EDWARD J. SHAUGHNESSY
Beaten by Convicts

Coolness of this girl, Miss Anne Spector of Malden, was of value to police and newspapermen in checking up whereabouts and number of prisoners attempting escape today from the state prison at Charlestown. Miss Spector, a stenographer at the Charlestown office of the J. Jacobs Potato company, saw the fugitives running across the Boston & Maine railroad yards. She picked up her telephone and gave the alarm.

McManus Nursed Prison Grudge

William P. McManus, one of the convicts in the Charlestown break, went to jail June 22, 1929, for 21 to 24 years with only one expressed regret.

He said he would have liked to have "got his hands on" John Raymundo, whose confession speeded the trial on June 21.

McManus pleaded guilty, with Raymundo and Alvaro Sylvia, to a series of holdups in New Bedford, Fairhaven, Acushnet and Fall River.

He was arrested in New Bedford, June 2, charged with the robbery of the New Bedford Hotel of $270.

Investigation showed that he was wanted in New York city, Elizabeth, N. J., and Newark, N. J., for similar jobs.

At the time of his arrest he was with Raymundo and Sylvia and with three women, who were later released.

On March 4, 1930, he and another state prison inmate were declared responsible for an attempt to set fire to the prison.

McManus, although a native of New Bedford, frequently called himself Charles P. Campbell of Cleveland, and is wanted by police of several eastern states under that name.

Wounded four times and near death, here is Convict William P. "Red" McManus, formerly of Roxbury, being taken in an ambulance to the state prison hospital. He was captured in the Boston & Maine railroad yards after a daring escape attempt in which he was shot by guards.

BUD MAHONEY BABE WILSON

Courage and presence of mind of these truck-drivers, Bud Mahoney and Babe Wilson, was of principal assistance in foiling the getaway of escaping state prison convicts today. Mahoney was at the wheel of his machine in the Boston & Maine railroad yards when the fugitives leaped on the running board, brandished knives and threatened to cut his heart out if he didn't turn over his ignition keys to them. Instead of so doing, he threw the keys away and leaped to the ground. Wilson, in another truck nearby, also killed his engine and leaped out. Arrival of police caused the flight of the convicts. One of the police bullets made the hole to which the drivers are pointing.

Gotham Dockmen Boycott Gulf Ships

New York, Dec. 3 (INS)—A boycott on all cargoes moving from 18 gulf ports, extending from Lake Charles, La., to Corpus Christie, Tex., was declared today by the International Longshoremen's Association.

The boycott, long threatened as a result of the refusal of shippers in the southern ports to recognize the I. L. A., went into effect at midnight.

Children Attack Suspect Cleared

A verdict of not guilty was made in Middlesex superior court in favor of Thomas Reid, 54, of Pearson rd., Somerville, who was charged with attempting to attack two Cambridge children.

Many Escapes In Record of Moriarty

Among the many names Francis "Turkey Joyce" Moriarty, 21, has been called in his 11 years of bedevilling police, the least apt is "unimaginative."

Early in his career, alienists described him as being without wit.

Here are the highlights of his "unimaginative" career since he was 10 years old.

Dec. 2, 1925—Escaped from custody of the Department of Public Welfare at State House.

Dec. 4, 1925—Fried apart bars in Bridgeport, Ct., jail, and escaped with two companions.

Dec. 10, 1925—Strolled out of Station 9, unnoticed.

Nov. 23, 1926—Escaped from a Stamford jail.

He apparently spent the next six years at assorted jobs of robbery, car stealing, gambling joint shake-downs, and simple burglary—until captured in Nov., 1932.

Dec. 14, 1932—Sentenced to 10 to 15 years in State Prison.

After a short stay he was transferred to Norfolk Prison Colony.

Sept. 21, 1935—Escaped from Norfolk Prison Colony.

Finally recaptured, he was brought before the courts to answer to several additional charges, and was sentenced to 5 to 7 years more, to be served after his present term expires.

CONVICT, DYING OF 4 SHOTS, REFUSES TO TELL OF PLOT

By JOHN H. NOONAN

Although admitting he knew he was dying, William P. McManus, 27-year-old gunman, refused flatly today in State's Prison Hospital to give any details of the prison break that brought him four bullet wounds.

In the hospital, McManus, whoseh ome is in Highland street, Roxbury, was questioned by Deputy Police Superintendent James R. Claflin, at the opening of an investigation into the short-lived escape of five inmates.

With Claflin in the hospital were Lieutenant John F. McCarthy, Lieutenant Francis M. Tiernan, Inspector William Bonner and Police Stenographer William Shanahan.

But what they learned from McManus as a basis on which to open the inquiry was absolutely nothing.

"I'M GOING TO DIE!"

Reaching McManus' bedside, Deputy Claflin told the convict that he was in a serious condition, but before the deputy could continue, McManus exclaimed:

"I know! I'm going to die. You're not telling me anything."

Deputy Claflin asked McManus if he wanted a priest, and he replied:

"No, I'm not afraid to die. I'm on my way."

"Realizing that you are going to die," said Claflin, "will you now tell us what took places today in the prison yard?"

"I'll leave that for somebody else to tell," said McManus crisply. "I was in it but I won't tell you who I was in with, or anything else about it. That's all. You can go on your way as far as I'm concerned."

FACE MURDER CHARGE

The police were compelled to give up McManus as a hopeless source of information, and they turned to questioning the three living convicts in the escape and other witnesses.

Out of the inquiry the police will present evidence tomorrow in Charlestown court in seeking murder warrants against McManus, Frank Moriarty, Edward McArdle and Charles T. O'Brien, all long-term prisoners.

SAW TWO KILLED

John W. Nawn, a state auditor, was in the prison print shop and witnessed the battle at the gate in which Lewis Richards, truck driver, of Somerville, was beaten to death and Philip Naples, 32, convict, was killed.

William H. Garfield of Abington, a civilian employe, was in the metal shop, and Melvin "Babe" Wilson of Charlestown, a truck driver, foiled two of the escaped convicts in their attempt to steal his truck at the potato sheds.

According to Garfield, Richards, while attempting to fight off Moriarty, was struck on the head with a steel bar swung by McManus.

Somerville Felon Led Bandit Gang

Edward B. McArdle, 24, of Skilton avenue, Somerville, was one of the four "Minute Men" bandits who pleaded guilty to a series of armed holdups in Middlesex County in April, 1934.

He was the acknowledged leader of the gang and was sentenced to serve 11 concurrent sentences of from eight to 10 years in state prison.

McArdle was released from Concord Reformatory in January, 1934. Two months later he and three companions were arrested at gun point by state troopers at Concord after they had terrorized Middlesex county for six weeks.

While the quartet operated they became known as the "Minute-men" bandits because several of the chain stores they held up were located on the route traversed by Paul Revere from Cambridge to Lexington.

McArdle's companions, now serving long sentences at Concord, were Raymond J. Cote, 19; James Tait, 22, and Harold Hutchins, 20, all of Somerville.

Break Won't Halt Curley Yule Pardons

Governor James M. Curley, in commenting on the State Prison break for freedom today, said:

"I am inclined to believe it is impossible to restrain, except through guards, walls and by other methods, the natural desire of an individual for liberty.

"It is only natural to expect that when a man sees an opportunity for escape he will take advantage of it.

"The prospected a pardon at some time as a return for exemplary conduct should serve as an inspiration for men to conform to the laws and regulations of our institutions.

"I believe it has a tendency in that direction and while what took place at Charlestown is possible, it is another evidence of human impulses which can never be covered by regulations or promises of reward."

"Will what occurred today have any effect on the program for Christmas pardons?" the governor was asked.

"Oh, no," he replied.

The governor added that John H. Backus, one of his secretaries, had searched the files in his office and reported that none of the men who tried to escape today had asked for a pardon.

"We must treat the matter in a broad sense," said the governor. "We must recognize the frailties of human nature."

O'BRIEN TRIES SECOND BREAK

Charles L. O'Brien, 28, of Roxbury, one of today's prison breakers, attempted to escape from Charlestown prison a year and a half ago, and was sentenced to an additional three to five years.

His original sentence to State prison came when he was only 19 years old, in 1926, when he was convicted of a series of breaking and entering and larceny cases in Brookline.

With Thomas J. Gildea, another Roxbury youth, he was for a long time considered one of the toughest youths in Boston.

He had not been at liberty long when he was arrested in New York with Gildea, January 2, 1932, on a charge of violating the Sullivan law.

Returned to Boston, he was identified as having participated in a holdup of a taxi driver on New Year's Eve and of a chain store manager on Christmas Eve the week before.

Finally, as his aged mother, Mrs. Thereza O'Brien, wept and pleaded for clemency, he was sentenced to 10 to 25 years in state prison for armed robbery.

He still had approximately 13 to 22 years of his original sentence to serve, as well as the additional escape sentence of three to five when he tried a recent break, a total of 16 to 27 years ahead of him.

One of the prisoners was fatally wounded by Chief of Police Marsh Corgan. The others escaped in a commandeered car.

CONVICTS FACE SLAYING BILLS

First degree murder indictments will be sought in the present grand jury session against all the convicts who participated in the state prison break, District Attorney William J. Foley announced today.

"It appears," Foley said, "that in the furtherance of a felony, namely an attempted escape from prison, Lewis Richards, the truck driver, was killed.

"In my opinion, there is sufficient evidence to warrant first degree murder indictments. The whole matter will be laid before the grand jury, probably tomorrow, and we shall ask for such indictments against all the prisoners concerned in the break."

HULL THREATENS TO JAIL ILLEGAL ARMS EXPORTERS

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Secretary Hull today threatened criminal prosecution of firms and individuals handling arms, ammunition, and implements of war who thus far have failed to register with the government as prescribed by the neutrality act.

Coincidently the secretary of state made public a list of 36 persons and companies that have met the requirements by registering within the prescribed 90-day period. Under the act, all those engaged in the manufacture, exportation and importation of arms, ammunition and implements of war are required to register with the secretary of state, paying a $500 fee.

ICKES' DISCLAIMER

Hull's press conference statement came after Secretary Ickes had contended his remarks November 21 about exports to Italy and Ethiopia had been "misunderstood" and that he had asked only for compliance with the administration's efforts to hold up shipments of "munitions."

Ickes' expressions then had been interpreted almost exclusively as calling upon the oil industry to hold up shipments of oil to the warring nations.

Hull asserted in a formal statement that a number of firms presumably coming under the neutrality law have not registered. Expressing the hope that their failure to do so has been due to "inadvertence" and that they will comply with the law within the next few days, he added:

5-YEAR TERM $10,000 FINE

"However, should they fail to do so within a reasonable time I shall find myself obliged to send the names of the companies which are presumed to have failed to comply with the law to the attorney general for such action as he may deem appropriate."

A penalty of five years imprisonment or $10,000 fine or both is provided for violation of the law. It provides that all persons registering shall maintain, subject to inspection for the National Munitions Control Board, such records of manufacture or export importation, or exportation of arms, ammunition, or implements of war as the board prescribes.

King George Demands British Arms Increase

Copyright, 1935, the Associated Press

London, Dec. 3—King George told Parliament today it is "urgently necessary that deficiencies in the defense forces" of the British Empire be "made good."

The King's warning came as the ninth Parliament of his reign convened. The King, in mourning for the death of his sister, Princess Victoria, was not present in person, but his words were read to the legislators by Viscount Hailsham, lord chancellor.

A few hours before Parliament met, the British Treasury announced the government had floated two loans totalling £300,000,000—about $1,458,000,000.

DEBTS REFINANCED

At least £200,000,000, it was understood, was intended as refinancing for other government debts. No immediate announcement was forthcoming as to the purpose for which the remaining £100,000,000 was intended.

The king conveyed to Parliament his government's point of view.

"The government's foreign policy," he declared, "will, as heretofore, be based on the firm support of the League of Nations.

MEASURES AGAINST ITALY

"In pursuance of these obligations, the government felt compelled to adopt, in co-operation with some 50 other members of the league, certain measures of an economic and financial nature, in regards to Italy.

"The fulfilment of our international obligations under the covenant, no less than the adequate safeguarding of the empire, makes it urgently necessary that deficiencies in the defense forces be made good.

"The king then took up internal affairs, particularly labor and unemployment, and said:

LABOR PROBLEMS

"The problem of securing improved conditions in the coal mining industry is receiving anxious consideration.

"In the opinion of the government, the time has come when the existing provisions for the safety of the workers in the mines should be reviewed in the light of modern scientific knowledge."

Girl Missing 2 Years Held in Theft Here

Plea Wins Judge

MILDRED BECK
She Wants to Go Back Home

Her great expectations considerably dashed, pretty 22-year-old Mildred Beck, whose arrest on a larceny charge revealed her to be missing from her Vermont home for the past two years, is ready to go home to the farm and forget the bright lights of the city.

Arraigned in municipal court today for alleged failure to pay for a $15 coat she appropriated from a department store rack, she assured Judge Daniel Gillen that if she had the carfare and he had the generosity to give her another chance she would be in her mother's arms as fast as a train would take her to St. Johnsbury, Vt.

The girl was placed on probation until June 3, after which the arresting officers, Joseph Murphy and Frank Cahill, took her to police headquarters to rebook her on another larceny charge.

"I lost my job as a house-maid in a Needham home," she explained. "Since I've been on my own these two years I've learned a lot of things. The fact that you're a girl and minus the protection of family doesn't get you anything but tough breaks.

"To hold down a job you have to be twice as good as a man or be able to say no with your lips and yes with your eyes like the movie stars. I've never had any training for a job, so I finally had to get a job as a maid.

"I think now when I go home I'll really appreciate my home and my family. Nobody else cares when things go against you. That coat I took. Well, it was that or pneumonia. So I took the coat . . . and probation. And so would you, if you were I."

The play, starring Jane Cowl, deals with the efforts of the wife of a secretary of state and that of a chief justice to obtain their husbands' election to the presidency.

PLAN FINES FOR OATH FOES

His attitude was made known as aids of Commissioner of Education Payson Smith pored over the thousands of oaths already received, following his refusal to accept the oath submitted by Professor Kirtley F. Mather, of Harvard, with his famous "amendments."

Acting on a ruling of Attorney General Paul A. Dever, Smith has refused to accept Mather's oath. Whether or not Mather will submit a new pledge and what action will be taken either by the state or by Harvard was a matter of conjecture today.

ASSAILS MATHER

That a penalty clause for the bill will be sought was made known by Representative Cornelius F. Donovan of Lynn.

Assailing the "arrogant defiance" of Professor Mather in refusing to subscribe to the exact terms of the law, Donovan declared that his stand draws attention to the inadequacies of the measure.

"In passing the statute," he declared, "the legislature assumed that there was enough loyalty, enough patriotism and enough 100 per cent Americanism in the teaching profession to render penalties unnecessary.

"Unfortunately, the truth is otherwise. Indications from all over the country show only too clearly that individuals, masquerading as instructors of the young, are striving to plant the red flag of Communism in our land.

"I, therefore, propose to take the necessary legislative steps to put teeth into the measure. My intention is to secure a statute which will provide an adequate jail term or a substantial fine or both for anyone who violates this law.

"In addition I propose to determine whether or not such refusal to pledge such allegiance to the flag of our country can constitutionally be followed by a denial of the right to such persons to teach in institutions chartered or supported in whole or in part by the Commonwealth."

OATHS SCANNED

The state's intention to see that the law was carried out 100 per cent was seen as the more than 40,000 signed oaths were sorted out in the department of education.

It appeared likely that scores of other certificates, in addition to Mather's, would fail to fulfill the specifications of the law.

Like Mather's they are expected to be returned. The final decision of Commissioner Smith will place the responsibility of prosecution on either the state or the school.

It was pointed out that failure to live up to the law could cost an institution its charter by Legislative action, but legal experts revealed that Harvard is beyond the jurisdiction of the Legislature.

TO ENFORCE LAW

Commissioner Smith expressed his determination to see that the law is carried out to the letter despite the absence of a penalty clause.

"I am not going to try to hinder the enforcement of the spirit of the law in any way. As long as it stands on the books, I think it is my duty to help enforce it.

"Mather's oath will be returned, also any other that has amendments and clauses included," he declared.

ITALY ORDERS MORE PLANES

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press

Rome, Dec. 3—Premier Mussolini's cabinet met the threat of a League of Nations oil embargo today with plans for increasing its supplies of oil and reducing its use.

Italy's air force, which would be strongly relied on in the event of war with Great Britain, was stiffened by an order for all vacancies to be filled. Special advantages were offered to recruits.

Oil is to be produced in greater quantities and every possible step taken to hasten Albanian production and the output of native Italian wells.

An administration for Italian minerals and metals was created to accelerate discovery and development of oil deposits on Italian lands.

Operators of coke gas factories and tar distilleries were instructed to maintain oil refining equipment sufficient to handle the output of their plants.

NEW LYNN RIOTING

Shoe Row Spreads to Haverhill

New violence in Lynn and a threat of a general strike in Haverhill were developments attesting to widespread unrest in the shoe industry today.

United Shoe and Leather Workers pickets again harrassed workers at the Lion Shoe Company in Allerton street, Lynn.

Rocks were thrown and one man was arrested, charged with beating another.

The outbreak there continued as a demonstration by the United Union against the Lion company for allegedly operating under a company-union agreement.

The Haverhill shoe situation was different. There the United, engaged in an underground battle with the Boot & Shoe Workers' Union for control of the industry, demanded the Haverhill Shoe Manufacturers' Board of Trade discuss new wage agreements on the basis of a 12½ per cent increase.

GENERAL STRIKE THREAT

Manufacturers were unresponsive to the demand, and a United official declared:

"If the request for a conference is not met within two days a general strike in the industry here will result and we will not wait until the end of the year to put it into effect."

Today's clash in Lynn was not as serious as that of yesterday in which scores were hurt when cars carrying Lion workers were stoned.

WOMEN ON PICKET LINE

About 100, half women, were on the picket line this morning. A rock barrage that did no damage, and booing, greeted arrival of the 300 company workers.

Charles G. Procop of Alley street, Lynn, was arrested by Sergeant Asa J. Darsney on a charge of assault and battery on Max Mallnow.

At the same time, the first effort in Massachusetts to have a firm penalized under the Wagner-Connery labor dispute law was underway.

Congressman William P. Connery of Lynn, co-author of the law, admitted that he was ready to join union officials in a petition to the Regional Labor Board in Boston charging that the shoe firm was violating the law by formation of a "company union."

SLUM 'RENTALS' URGED ON U. S.

Washington, Dec. 3 (AP)—Secretary Ickes said today that Senator George (D.), Georgia, would offer a bill when Congress convenes to authorize the public works housing division to make payments to city governments in lieu of taxes on slum clearance developments.

This step had been advocated by Ickes after Comptroller-General J. R. McCarl held up payments intended to defray the cost of municipal services for two housing projects in Atlanta.

Ickes had suggested payment of 5per cent of the gross annual rental for each development.

At the same time, Ickes said that despite a suit by Boston property owners seeking to hold the south side development there, construction was going ahead.

BETTY ALDEN

on 'Beacon Hill'

Red Cross Motor Corps Entertain at Tea

By BETTY ALDEN

THE RED CROSS MOTOR CORPS gave a tea party yesterday afternoon at the Chapter House on Commonwealth avenue in honor of the retiring captain of the corps, Mrs. Bowen Tufts . . .

Paradoxically enough Mrs. James M. Rothwell, the new captain, and her corps of volunteers, who were very serious figures in their trim black uniforms and trench caps, were extremely cordial and gracious hostesses as they presided over the frivolous flower and candie laden tea table . . .

ELISE RUSSELL

Mrs. J. Oliver Beebe of Boston, wearing a black satin gown with a small satin turban edged with caracul, poured, and among those assisting her were Barbara Stevens, Priscilla Phelan, Jane Hamlin and Mrs. Raymond Gargan, all in their uniforms . . . Others assisting were Miss Harriet Robeson, in an olive green suit with a giddy yellow printed 'kerchief . . . Catherine Cunningham Gray, in an oxford gray knitted dress with bright stripes of red and yellow . . . Dorothy Austin, wearing a tailored suit of bluish gray tweed . . . Jean Fuller, who is frequently glimpsed about town in her Red Cross toga, was in "civies" for the tea, her rust wool dress being very becoming and its brown velvet 'kerchief matching her little tricorne hat . . .

Peggy Blake and Elise Russell dashed in to greet their fellow volunteers and share a cup of tea . . . Mrs. Henry Kitchell Webster, Jr., was another guest, as was Barbara Soule, one of the Vincent Club officers, who wore a dark green outfit under a short fur coat . . .

When the Motor Corps invited their friends to tea they didn't mention the interesting collection of dolls they have ready to distribute as gifts to some of their little patients . . . but the little hand clothed dolls stole the show during the tea party and received a large share of admiration . . .

At Bachelors' Cotillion

FUZZY FABYAN, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Marshall Fabyan, carried on her youthful shoulders the responsibility of representing all her sister debs in Boston at the dignified and exclusive Bachelors' Cotillion last evening in Baltimore . . . She was chaperoned by Mrs. Jack Ewing of Baltimore and her escort was Mr. J. Hamilton Ober . . . Fuzzy, who will be formally greeted tomorrow evening by Boston society at Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth's dance in her honor, wore a white satin gown to the Bachelors' Cotillion . . .

A month from tomorrow will be the day of days for Jane Butler Smith and Keith Steele . . . But there will be no middlesisling for this popular couple, who will have a very quiet wedding in the Smiths' drawing room and later receive their friends at a small reception, also at home . . . Jane is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Butler Smith of Brookline, and Keith's parents are Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Carnegie Steele of Buckminster road, Brookline . . .

Marjorie Motley, the jolly little sub-deb daughter of the E. Preble Motleys of South Hamilton, has been brightening her family's household during the long holiday week-end from boarding school . . . Margie is already a prominent figure in the doings of the North Shore's post-juveniles during the summer season and everybody predicts a very gay debutante career for her when she steps into the social swim in earnest . . .

Horse Show Opens on Thursday

LAST YEAR THE CONSTRUCTION of the boxes at the Horse Show in the Armory made it practically impossible for the blue blooded box holders to see who was who beyond the occupants of the neighboring boxes and the social scribes had to report who was there by guess and by gorry . . . But this week when the show opens its four-day run at Commonwealth Armory those who make it such a brilliant social event, will be on parade during intermissions in the judging of the fine entries . . .

A runway has been constructed in front of the boxes where socialites may gather to discuss the winners of blues and visit with their friends, and the tiers of boxes have been raised to afford a better view of the turf . . .

The show begins Thursday evening and will continue through Sunday, with matinee performances on Saturday and Sunday . . . Saturday evening has been designated as "Pink Coat Night," when seven of the prominent hunt teams of New England will participate in the special hunting classes . . .

• • •

Many Hunt Teams Entered

GROTON AND MILLWOOD have entered hunt teams for the first time, in addition to the five clubs, Myopia, Dedham, Cohasset, Norfolk and Jacobs Hill, which took part last year, with Myopia the victor . . . Among those invited to ride in the Corinthian class the same evening are the masters of the various hunt clubs, including Mrs. Robert B. Almy, Mrs. Thomas James, George Timmins, Richard Ely Danielson and Carleton Davenport . . .

Humorous predictions concerning the show are that Freddie the Cabman of Copley square has entered the Gay Nineties class, which promises to include every kind of rig out, from the sublime to the ridiculous . . . and Mrs. Florence Dibble's famous Flowing Gold is being trained so that he can enter the ring, bow and scrape before one of the prominent winners and present a trophy which will be fastened to his bridle . . . and the managers of the stables are going home feeling very happy because listed among the entertainments is a dinner party Saturday evening in their special honor.

By MARGUERITE DOWNEY

CHRISTMAS benefit season is on . . . Senior Philomatheias launching it yesterday with a luncheon and bridge at the Brunswick Casino.

The decorations of this popular spot . . . red satin and silver . . . seemed in keeping with the affair . . . which aided the club basket fund.

Mrs. John Brennan, function manager of the hotel and also a charter member of the club, greeted members of the club . . . looking most attractive in sepia brown . . . heavy gold ornaments at its neckline.

Mrs. Vincent P. Roberts had a busy day greeting guests and trying to locate the missing owner of a coat check, Mrs. Frank A. Regan, chairman of the day, was smartly dressed in black velvet with revers of white lapin. Assisting her was Mrs. James McDonough . . . a radio artist for the occasion . . . announcing rules for pivot and contract via the microphone.

Ivory Satin

In her usual energetic way . . . Mrs. Daniel Holland directed the chance selling. Her dark gown was trimmed with ivory satin and her co-workers, Mrs. John O'Neill and Mrs. Daniel Coveney chose green crepe for their bridge frocks.

"Ladies in red" were Mrs. John A. Minihan of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Isabella Doyle . . . the former selecting rust crepe and Mrs. Doyle choosing a soft rosy shade with matching ruffles. Both are active in the Emmanuel League and were joined for an afternoon of bridge by Jane McKey, Emmanuel League president and Mrs. John A. Attridge of Brookline.

Merry Group

Another merry group included Mrs. Joseph M. Kirby of Belmont, vari-colored brocade forming the collar of her black dress, and Mrs. James Carr and Mrs. David O'Connell, effective in black and white.

Mrs. James Holland had a feather in her hat which contrasted with her rust costume, and Mrs. H. J. Aherne . . . a committee member . . . wore dark brown sheer.

Mrs G. Frank Sullivan of Brookline . . . who is directing the Philomatheia ball, Jan. 16 at the Copley-Plaza . . . wore brown matelasse. With her were Mrs. Edward Downey . . . her dark dress trimmed with lame . . . and Mrs. Charles Hall . . . a green blouse topping her black skirt.

Take these 3 Simple Steps to Better CONTROL OF COLDS

1. To Help Build RESISTANCE to Colds

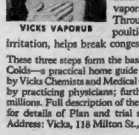
Live normally—avoid excesses. Eat simple food and keep elimination regular. Drink plenty of water. Take some exercise daily—outdoors preferably. Get plenty of rest and sleep. (During the colds season, gargle night and morning with Vicks Voratone Antiseptic, especially designed for safe daily use to aid in defense against infection which may enter through the mouth.)

2. To Help PREVENT Many Colds

VICKS VA-TRO-NOL

At the first warning nasal irritation, sniffle or sneeze, use Vicks Va-tro-nol—just a few drops up each nostril. Va-tro-nol is especially designed for the nose and upper throat—where most colds start. Used in time, Va-tro-nol helps to prevent many colds—and to throw off head colds in the early stages.

3. To Help END a Cold Sooner



VICKS VAPORUB

If a cold has developed, or strikes without warning, rub throat and chest at bedtime with Vicks VapoRub. The VapoRub acts two ways at once: (1) By stimulation through the skin, like a poultice or plaster. (2) By inhalation of its penetrating medicated vapors, direct to inflamed air-passages. Through the night, this combined vapor-poultice action loosens phlegm, soothes irritation, helps break congestion.

These three steps form the basis of Vicks Plan for Better Control of Colds—a practical home guide to fewer and shorter colds. Developed by Vicks Chemists and Medical Consultants; tested in extensive clinics by practicing physicians; further proved in everyday home use by millions. Full description of the Plan in each Vicks package—or write for details of Plan and trial samples of Vick Colds-Control Aids. Address: Vicks, 118 Milton St., Greensboro, N. C.

LEGISLATORS JOIN PROTEST ON NEW TAXES

Voices of many legislators joined early in the mounting wave of protest against recommendations of the special recess commission on taxation to raise $17,445,000 in new revenue.

Their scathing criticism, particularly of the provisions to add 200,000 new taxpayers by reducing state income taxes to hit small wage earners, indicated that many of the commission's proposals would meet unalterable opposition in the coming session of the Legislature.

In addition to those affected by the proposed new levies and the criticism of legislators, there has been a surprising wave of protest from disinterested groups and individuals.

The burden of their protest is summed up in the suggestion that more drastic economy in government instead of increased taxation is the remedy.

LITTLE BENEFIT SEEN

While the recommendations of the commission were admittedly made in an effort to relieve burdens placed on real estate and manufacturing companies, the opinion was freely expressed they would receive little benefit.

Senator Henry Parkman, chairman of the senate committee on taxation in 1933 and 1934, charged the report was "all one-sided, bearing hardest on the mass of the people."

He also declared it "brutal" to recommend the removal of the present exemption of taxes on $1000 or less from securities. He said:

"It means that the retired school teacher, for example, is taxed 6 per cent on the small savings she has at the end of her life, while the active teacher is taxed only 1½ per cent of her income."

Boston will also be robbed in favor of manufacturing cities, he said, by a tax on store inventories, proposed in the report.

REALLY SALES TAX

He declared the inventory and utility taxes amounted to a sales tax, although the commission reported itself as opposed to sales taxes.

Promise of opposition to the proposal to reduce income tax exemptions from $2500 to $1000 for married couples and $2000 to $1400 for single persons was also given by two members of the legislative committee on taxation.

Representative John A. Murray of Watertown and Senator F. Eugene Cheney, the two members, declared themselves as particularly opposed to this recommendation.

Opposition to exemption reductions in the income tax was also voiced by Representative Thomas H. Deegan, Dorchester, and Representative James E. Kiley of Charlestown.

CRITICIZES "EXTREME"

Former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols criticized income tax exemption reductions and the proposal to tax savings accounts. He declared:

"It seems to me that this is pushing taxes down the throats of those people who have suffered the most during the depression. This is the extreme in taxation and I am confident it will not pass.

"Savings accounts, too, are something which we have always considered should be protected and encouraged. This is the most extreme plan for taxation ever proposed here."

Charles E. Lee, executive secretary of the Boston Real Estate Exchange, expressed doubt that the provisions would afford any real relief for real estate. He declared:

"I agree the effect of our tax system has been to bear down heaviest on real estate. But I question whether the report of the commission will result in any real relief to real estate."

SHIFTED TO WORKERS

Carl P. Dennett, chairman of the National Economy League, said:

"This report brings out the usual political course of taxation. First, industry is taxed until it begins to go out of existence or move to other states, then the burden is shifted to the workers.

"What constructive good can be accomplished by shifting the burden of taxation to the so-called poor, by reducing income tax exemptions?"

Small Wage Earners Protest Tax

Forgotten Man' Remembered in New Levy

Miss Irene O'Conner — Arthur White

Under the new legislative plan a reduction in exemption from income taxes would be made from $2500 to $1800 for married people; from $2000 to $1600 for single persons.

The "forgotten man" found himself suddenly remembered yesterday in the newly proposed tax measure, but for the most part this particular kind of recognition met with vociferous disapproval.

A street canvass by a Boston Evening American reporter revealed the dissatisfaction of the small wage earner who will lose $400 exemption from taxes if the new law goes into effect.

James Shaughnessy of Brighton, a railroad police officer, said:

"The poor man has enough taxes to pay. They are invisible taxes, but they are there, as shown in the price for food. I think it is the rich man who would find it the easiest to supply the needed money."

To which Miss Margaret Murray of Dorchester, a demonstrator, added:

"I think the single man who gets only $1400 a year, and the married man who earns only $1800 a year, must find it hard enough sledding as things are now. They're the under dogs, and this will be just another burden for them to carry."

Perley A. Grows, a salesman, who lives in Charlestown, also decried the new taxing method. He said:

"This is just another hardship for the little man. I think it's fairer to tax a man who can afford to own property rather than the man who receives small pay."

Col. Walter Pratt — James Shaughnessy

Pratt, paper manufacturer, declared:

"I think everyone should contribute to the support of the government in proportion to their means. A few dollars tax will not make the lot of the man who earns $1400 any harder. It will give him a responsibility and he will be more careful in electing his public officials."

Perley A. Grows — Miss Peggy Murphy

But Miss Irene O'Connor of Boston, a clerk, upheld the popular opinion. She said:

"Why not tax the person who will not feel it so keenly? And the person who will feel it the least is the wealthy man."

"I was married a month ago and under the old plan I am exempt from taxation. But under the revised plan I will be affected. The answer to the problem of the much-needed money is to be found in the rich man, and not in us little fellows.

"An action should be performed the easiest way and with the least suffering to everybody. Certainly a man with a substantial income is not going to feel an additional tax as much as a man of a small income."

13 CITIES VOTE BIG

Gillis and Baker Vote Watche d

One of the largest votes ever cast in a Brockton city election appeared certain today with Mayor Horace C. Baker and his opponent of two years ago, City Solicitor Lawrence E. Crowley, contesting for a majority of 31,522 eligible ballots.

Elsewhere in the other 12 Massachusetts cities municipal elections were being held, with Andrew J. "Honey" Gillis' attempted comeback in Newburyport occupying the spotlight.

Opposing Gillis is Councillor John M. Kelleher, who has waged a vigorous campaign against the once-fiery, but now soft-spoken "Bossy."

Gillis, the ex "gob" who served two terms in Newburyport city hall, was nominated last month for mayor in a primary remarkable for its calmness.

The Brockton election, in which 57 candidates for municipal offices combined to bring out the record vote, has been keenly contested in the seven wards and 29 election precincts.

In Gloucester, too, election interest was at fever pitch with police ordered to guard the polls for the first time in the city's history.

ACTS ON RUMORS

Mayor Newell of Gloucester said the order to City Marshal Daniel M. Casey did not cast reflections on any group or individual, but rumors coming to his attention necessitated the action.

Opposing the octogenarian dentist-mayor is Attorney Weston U. Friend.

A new record is being established in Salem, a Democratic city, by electing unopposed Mayor George J. Bates for a seventh consecutive term. Bates is the leader of the Republican party in the city.

A four-cornered fight faces voters in Leominster, where Mayor Sidney E. Bell is seeking a second term. His is opposed by Councillors Harold L. Burdett and John W. Mackay, and Harold J. Austin, a real estate man.

In Quincy, an off-year election is being held. Chief interest centers on the campaign of Attorney Avery W. Gilkerson, who directed the ouster proceedings against Mayor Charles A. Ross, for a seat in the city council.

Gilkerson is opposed by Roy W. Means, who led the attorney in the primaries, and Councillor Daniel S. Dennehy, who is running on stickers.

The campaign for mayor in Taunton has been one of the most bitter in years with City Solicitor John E. Welch, Democrat, opposing Councillor Arthur E. Poole, Republican. Other minor offices will also be filled.

A three-cornered fight terminates in Plymouth, where Acting Mayor Charles L. Dunn, former Representative Alfred A. Grant and Thomas W. Kearney oppose one another.

WOMEN DEFEND 'CURFEW GIRL'

New York, Dec. 3 (INS)—The New York League of Business Women today stood in the front ranks of civic and improvement groups demanding a square deal for Edith Maxwell, pretty "curfew girl," convicted of killing her father in Virginia.

Following a general meeting in Hotel Pennsylvania, the league's board unanimously adopted this resolution:

"We condemn the conviction of and woman who, in the defense of her life, kills another person.

"We condemn the code which permits a father to chastise a daughter over 21 years of age."

For fighting back against that stern patriarchal code of Virginia's mountain country, Edith Maxwell had been sentenced to 25 years in prison.

CHAPTER TWENTY

Suddenly Nell heard Ricky's voice. Out there at the top of the stairs. She wondered if her mind were gone. She ran out and looked in his shining eyes. They were full of tears. Happy tears. A miracle was wrought for them.

Under a street lamp he held a letter. "Read it, Nell. Say what I'm to do."

In that hour—that really blessed hour—they made the most momentous decision of their lives.

Said Nell, awed: "It's an answer direct from God!"

"Heaven's on our side, dear!"

Their glowing opportunity had come. The letter was from Les Edwards. It offered Ricky a job. In the automobile plant in Detroit.

"You'll have to start at the bottom, Rick. The old man thinks hardship is good for the young. But it's a chance. If you've the courage you used to have and half the ability, I'm counting on, you won't be at the bottom long."

"It's the chance I've prayed for," said Ricky.

They stood in silence before the dark river which flowed past them full of mystery. He had a firm hold of her hand. Only in the clinging together did they reveal the dread in both their minds.

Finally Ricky spoke: "You don't doubt I should take it, Nell?"

"Of course, you'll take it."

"It means leaving you!"

He stopped suddenly and gathered her in his arms. He held her close. "That's going to be hard. Hard enough waiting from week to week. This will be months—maybe a whole year. A year without you, Nell. Coming home to an empty room. Thinking of you. Aching for you. Night after night. I don't want to go back to that!"

"You've Got to"

"You've got to, Rick, this is for both of us."

He kissed her. She felt tears on her cheek. His tears. He said hoarsely, touching her hair which seemed so red against her white face and yearning eyes:

"This being together as we are now will seem like a dream. Something too good to be true. You belong to me, Nell; I to you. It's not right for us to be parted.

"You never know when you take a drastic step like this just what it is you're doing. We may never have each other in the same way again."

She shut her eyes tightly, not wanting him to see their wild rebellion, and that she longed to cry out, desperately:

"Don't go; don't leave me!"

They were both aware of the waste before them. Ricky would receive $75 a month. They two alone could live on very little because their love was great.

But Nell couldn't walk out on her mother. It might be years before he would earn enough to set her free.

Yet she pleaded, all tender passion:

"You don't think you could ever lose me, Rick? To the bottom of the sea; to the top of the highest mountain, hide where you will my thought would find you out.

"You'll make your way quickly now. You won't mind the little anguish. You'll know I'm counting on you. Waiting for you. Needing you. Ricky, I need you most terribly to make good on this!"

"What do you mean, Nell? Why, most terribly?"

She had suddenly to reach for her handkerchief and wipe away the fast-falling tears.

He forced her to look upward in his face: "Why do you cry about it, Nell?"

She opened her hand in an expressive gesture, "Don't you know? Haven't you guessed? It's not only you and I—"

Their Baby

"What are you talking about? You can't mean—"

She gave a half-sobbing laugh: "Yes—that!"

He stood with his mouth half open, an utterly stunned look in his eyes. He released one hand and ran it heavily across his forehead. He said slowly: "You must be mistaken. It can't possibly be."

"It is. I'm sure. A long time."

She looked with wild supplication into his shocked, despairing face: "Don't take it this way."

"But what will we do? How in the name of heaven can we meet this? You'll lose your job. I can't take care of you."

His hair slicked back made his face sharp, almost bleak. He said, shivering: "Let's get a cup of coffee. It's frightfully cold."

She hid her face from him and wept bitterly.

"Oh, God, Nell, don't cry like that!" He pulled her to him and said, groaning: "What have I done to you? My poor little darling!"

They both felt better. She took his handkerchief and carefully wiped her face.

"I want to say this, Rick, before we leave this park. I'm not going to be sorry about it. I've wanted a child since I first loved you. Now it's coming to us. We're not ready—but it's here just the same. It's not going to be robbed and saddened and accepted reluctantly. That's a coward way. It's not going to be mine."

"Nor mine either, Nell. I'd be glad: I'd say it was the finest thing in the world if I could see a way to meet it. But it seems terrible for me to walk off and leave you to fight it out alone. You're not equal to it. I think you've got to come along with me now, Nell."

"And leave my mother? I can't do that. She and Jimmy would starve. I'd be haunted."

"You might land a job in Detroit. We'd live on my earnings and send yours to her."

"It's too much of a gamble. Jobs are desperately scarce. I can't chance it."

"When you quit your job—and you'll have to—what will they do then?"

"That won't be for a long time. And I won't have any choice in the matter. I won't deliberately let them down. Oh, I think I'll be lucky and work to the very end. Edith Simmons did. They even said it couldn't be Edith's baby.

"If I get a break like that, I'll save. You'll send me a little each month. I'll put it away for the big time. We'll get by gloriously. As soon as it's over, he and I will be on the next train, you there to claim us—eh what?"

Trembling Hands

He laid trembling hands on her pale, lighted face. Even in the dark, he saw the shine of tears.

"I could wish it will be simple like that, Nell."

"But it will. I won't need much time off. A month altogether. Then I'll come to you. I'll get a job out there. I'm awfully strong: I'll recover quickly."

Ricky was stirred to the heart. He stared at Nell, blinking: "You are strong. And terribly brave." He kissed her and longed to say some bright, comforting word. But he couldn't be balmy about this.

She read his thought. "We'll forget the hardship, Rick. You'll be promoted. We'll have that backyard—the tree. He'll play there. He'll be so cute. Eyes like yours—"

Tiny Winter Hats With a Whimsical Air

By ANNICE BRINK

MISS JANICE MINER, Wellesley Hills debutante, models daytime hats that willingly take all the responsibility for being amusing upon themselves . . . they'll never allow your winter things to sag into an uninteresting state. Left, a felt Tyrolean rolls up its brim, thereby taking off a few years, and mounts a whirligig of coq feathers on top. Very inexpensive, as is the afternoon hat of felt, rhinestone clips and starched mesh veil, on the right. Here the turban front goes fetchingly stream-line, and has its pert veil assume a fan-shape. For shopping details on either hat, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

Health

Treatment Of Womb Cancer

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

CANCER OF the womb is a disease which strikes terror to the hearts of women. It is a secret, agonizing dread, the victim fearing to share her troubles with anyone. She is frightened that an operation will be ordered.

It is this very attitude and neglect that make cancer of the womb so incurable. Yet it is possible to get rid of this disease if it is recognized and attended to in its early stages.

This form and place of attack is one of the most common varieties of cancer attacking the female. On this account, I believe every woman who is of the cancer age should be familiar with the symptoms of the disturbance. To have this knowledge will aid in early recognition.

Cancer of the cervix, the neck of the womb, is more common in women who have borne children. It is especially liable to occur in those who have suffered repeated laceration of the cervix due to numerous pregnancies. Yet it may occur in women who have never been pregnant.

EARLIEST SYMPTOM

The earliest symptom is a discharge of blood. This sometimes causes the trouble to be confused with some menstrual disorder. At times, too, it is erroneously thought to mark the beginning of the "menopause," or "change of life." If the discharge is profuse, foul, watery or irritating, cancer should be suspected.

Even if the discharge is not marked with blood it is best to consult a doctor. The appearance of a discharge of "whites" after a period of freedom from this discomfort should be regarded as suspicious. It is especially significant if the discharge appears after exertion, straining at stool, or after the use of a douche.

If more women were examined and treated for disorders of the womb, fewer cases of incurable cancer would be seen.

Many a woman avoids visiting the doctor because she dreads the embarrassment of the examination. Any physician of experience has seen many cases of cancer that have been long disregarded. It is probable most of these persons have not been near a doctor since their last confinement.

Adele Garrison's Love Serial

Given in Marriage

CHAPTER 513

"I'M NOT worrying about anything," I told my husband mendaciously, for the coming formal observance of Marion's birthday with the opening of the envelopes in her grandmother's lockbox was weighing heavily upon my mind. "But Harriet says that I am not to attend to anything, no matter how necessary I may deem it, until I am fully recovered — and although I think she's talking nonsense—"

"On the contrary," Dicky interrupted explosively, "she's talking the best brand of sense there is. I'm going to ride herd on you myself from now on. So if you have any little pet chores on your mind, they'll either go undone, or old Lil and your humble servant will take care of 'em. You'd better spoon the lentils if you want us to get busy."

A JOB FOR DICKY

"The trouble is," I said slowly, "that the only 'chore' on my mind is one that must be kept from Lillian—"

"And you're afraid that I won't measure up to the standard of efficiency set by the famous Fixit twins, Missus Graham and Missus Underwood," Dicky interrupted. "Of course, I know I'm a mere worm of the dust beside you two, but Lady, I have my points, honest, I have, and I'm the most willing cuss you ever saw. Won't you give me a trial?"

"Give you a trial?" I echoed. "I don't want anybody but you to attend to this."

"Nobody shall," he promised. "If you'll just outline the 'salient features'—how's that for high?—of this commission, I shall fly to execute it."

"You won't need to go as fast as that," I told him, smiling. "It's only this. We promised Marion that Carolyn, Ronald and Bob should come home for her birthday and the opening of her lockbox, and then Sam Brixton invited himself and Helena for the opening in such fashion that we couldn't refuse them because of Carolyn and Ronald."

"The bounder probably counted upon that very thing," Dicky said, his face taking on the bored expression which it always holds when Samuel Brixton's name is mentioned.

MADGE AGREES

"I think so." I agreed, "but—Harriet tells me that Lee Chow is still in a very precarious condition. Can he stand such a gathering? Ought we not cancel all those invitations by telephone —We won't have time to write now—and have just Marion come home?"

"It's that all that's bothering you?" Dicky asked, and suddenly I realized that in the back of his mind there had been coiled the thought that I was worrying about Hugh.

"There's nothing else," I told him promptly. "Isn't that enough?"

"It isn't anything to broadcast," he said, "but I don't understand why you don't want old Lil to know about it. After all, it's her daughter's inheritance that's going to be displayed."

"Of course she'll have to know about it," I said. "And she can attend to the cancelling of the invitations to the youngsters at Yale and Whitney Hall. But she has such an aversion to Sam Brixton that I know she won't want to risk getting him on the telephone. Besides, dearest, I have the feeling that it will take a man and a determined, resourceful one, to thwart Sam Brixton's determination to be here when that lockbox is opened."

Bake Fruit Cakes

If you are planning to bake fruit cakes for the family or for gifts, now is the time before the rush of Christmas is upon us, to make them and tuck away for ripening, as fruit cakes improve upon standing. In storing, however, be sure to keep the cake airtight to avoid drying out, and pour brandy over it, if possible, to give a rich mellow flavor.

The modern contributions to simplified fruit cakes are the prepared mixes on the market, to which liquid need only to added, to give a delicate fine-flavored cake. These mixes come in pound tins which can be used for baking the cake and storing it. They have a great appeal to many people.

Baking in a casserole is the modern method comparable to covering cake with paper during baking to keep from drying out. These cakes make an ideal gift, baked in an attractive pyrex casserole.

Here are recipes for a few of the simple fruit cakes. While talking of cakes, we wish to make a correction of errors which appeared in the prize winning cakes a week ago. One cup of liquid was omitted from Mrs. Roy Wilson's checkerboard cake, and in the sponge cake of Mrs. Smith, the baking powder was given as 1 teaspoon instead of 1½ teaspoons.

MINCEMEAT FRUIT CAKE

1 pound can of mincemeat
1 cup nut meats
1 cup raisins
1 tsp. vanilla
½ cup melted butter
1 cup sugar
3 egg yolks
2 cups flour (all purpose)
1 tsp. baking soda, dissolved in
1 tbsp. boiling water
2 stiffly beaten egg whites

Mix the ingredients in the order given, and bake in a well greased and floured tube pan, in a slow oven (325 deg. F.), for about one hour. Allow this to age, as an ordinary fruit cake.

15-POUND FRUIT CAKE

1 lb. fat
1½ lbs. brown sugar
1½ lbs. brown sugar
1 doz. eggs
1 cup molasses
1 cup jelly, melted
1 cup strong coffee
1¼ lbs. flour
1 tsp. cinnamon
1 tsp. nutmeg
2 tsp. soda
1 lb. citron
1 lb. figs
2 oranges, grated rind
3 lbs. currants
4 lbs. raisins
1 lb. blanched chopped almonds
1 cup flour for dredging fruit
½ cup brandy, if available
1 tsp. cloves

Cream the shortening (a wooden potato masher and large dish pan helps), and add the sugar gradually. Beat until light. Add the flour, spices, and soda sifted together. Next add the fruit, which has been cleaned, and the citron and almonds, finely cut. Dredge all with flour. Mix thoroughly. Fold in beaten whites. Brandy is added with coffee. Put the mixture in buttered tins of desired shape and size, cover tops with heavy wrapping paper, and steam 3 hours. Remove cakes from steamer and bake in a slow oven (275 deg.) for 1 hour. Makes 15 pounds of cake.

DELICIOUS DATE CAKE

1 pkg. dates
1 tsp. soda
1 cup boiling water
1 tbsp. shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg
1 cup chopped walnut meats
½ to 1 cup seedless raisins
1 tsp. vanilla
1½ cups flour
½ tsp. salt.

Stone the dates and cut them into small pieces. Sprinkle over them the soda, then pour the boiling water over them. Let the mixture cool. Cream shortening and sugar together, add egg, without separating, the walnut meats, raisins, and vanilla and beat. Add the date mixture and mix well. Then add the flour sifted with the salt. Bake in a slow oven (325 to 350 deg.) for 45 to 50 minutes.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Girl in ove Can earn All Vifely Arts

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SUPPOSE a fine young man with a rather scantily-paying job fell in love with a beautiful and charming girl and became engaged to her.

Suppose he rented and furnished a little apartment, with special attention to the tiny kitchen where the bride's domestic industry and thrift were to make it possible to stretch the weekly pay-check so that every necessary bill could be met.

And suppose he discovered, on moving into the new home, that the distractingly lovely creature he had married was as helpless among the shiny pots and pans as a rather backward child would be.

What would next happen?

This is exactly what "Panic-stricken" is wondering. She happens to be the girl I have in mind. Her wedding is scheduled to come off next month. Shall I let her tell her own story?

"I haven't treated Jim fairly," she acknowledges, "but at first I wasn't so much in love with him and didn't see what I was doing. Now that I really love him very much—in fact, I worship him—I haven't the courage to say or do anything that might result in my losing him.

"My mother and sisters have always spoiled me. I was the pet, the pretty one. My only job was to get married. I didn't have to do things around the house, and am naturally dumb in regard to using my hands. I couldn't possibly cook anything, I don't know how to clean and if you could only see the way I make a bed!

"Jim doesn't suspect the state of things. My family have seen to that.

"What shall I do? Tell him the truth now? He may throw me over, or have a big explosion after we are married, I can't, can't give him up! But it is a nightmare to think that I am probably going to ruin our marriage."

For all situations of this kind, love itself is the remedy. What marvels women have accomplished in the world, with love as the motive force!

So the plight "Panic-stricken" is in is nothing like as tragically serious as the poor girl imagines it to be. In fact, so long as she has a pair of hands—even awkward and untaught ones—a spoiled, idle girl can always make up for lost time and learn to be housekeeper, wife, mother—whatever her destiny may demand of her. But she has to want to.

It's not pleasant to think that one has deceived the man one is terribly in love with—and deceived him on a point that counts. It's not nice to foresee that one is going to be a drag and expense where one ought to be a help.

But why have it that way? A girl who loves a man enough can make of herself almost anything that she knows will please him. In a case like this, where it isn't enough to be charming and pretty and loveable—not enough, even, to be deeply in love oneself—I cannot see why "Panic-stricken" should be willing to lose a moment's time in the matter of making herself over.

Only a month to do it in? But there's a lot of time in a month, if one is willing to work very hard every day, and if one loves one's husband-to-be so much that mop and egg-beater can seem magical symbols of future happiness.

The first months of housekeeping, won't be easy ones, I admit. But they can, nonetheless, be happy ones. In fact, next to the joy of "re itself, that could be a greater rapture than for a chronically useless person to learn to express herself in useful, necessary ways?

I wish that all love-problems could be solved as easily as this one.

SHALL SHE CALL HIM ON THE PHONE?

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

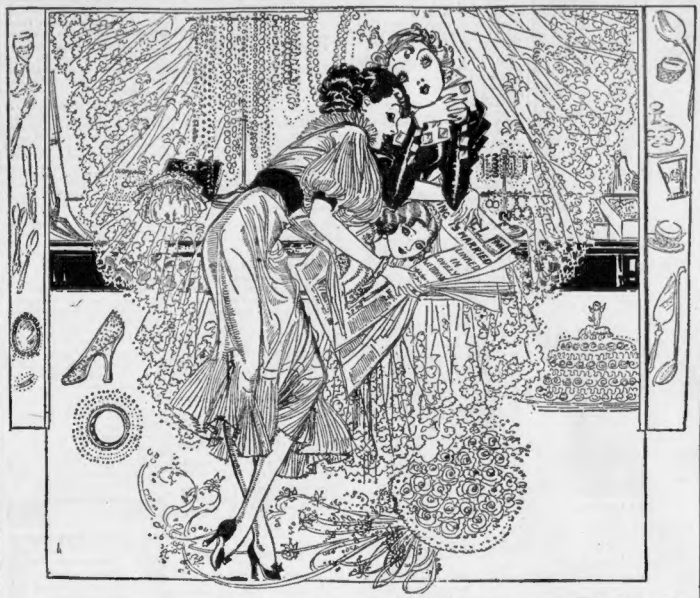
For two summers we have met during our vacation. When I arrived home, he asked when we could go out together again. He said he couldn't make a date because he didn't know whether he would have to work late or not, and as there is no way for him to call me on the phone, he asked me to call him.

He works late some evenings, all right, but I am uncertain whether to call him or not. Do you think it would be all right for me to phone him, as he has asked me to do? J. F.

Quite all right under the circumstances, especially as you have known this young man for some time, and he is not at liberty to use the phone where he works evenings.

"Big News!"

BY NELL BRINKLEY



WHAT are these pretty girls doing in a lull between selling pretty things to pretty ladies? They are reading what is big, important, juicy news to girls. About a wedding! About a girl—like themselves, in love with love—who is getting married.

They are reading in the paper about the veil—the mist through which a bride looks at a new world. About the flowers, the bouquet she carried. About the cake—the most fairy-tale cake she will ever have. About the ring—the glittering ring that the little bride always makes sures is turned "out" so it will show well in the photograph. About her slippers of silver, and the necklace that was her father's mother's. And the bridegroom's gift—and whether he was good-looking, or just plain and GOOD looking.

Dear, dear! Where is the news from Ethiopia; the sordid killing of a doctor by a girl who has missed the best of Love; the stock-market; the political aspect? All, all faded away into "fillers." Unimportant news.

The beautiful WEDDING is the big news to the pretty girls!

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Beauty Questions And Answers

Question—Kindly send me the Rumanian Health Diet. I understand it is also used as a reducing diet. However, I am not overweight but am anxious to learn how to eat properly for perfect health. MRS. A. S.
South Boston.

Answer—Since you did not enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope I am unable to forward this diet to you. Only letters which are accompanied by return postage receive personal answers, and the diet is too lengthy to be published in this column. This diet will not take off excess poundage but will keep an alkaline in the body. Please write to me again for this diet and don't forget to enclose necessary postage.

Question: What causes gooseflesh on arms and legs. I am only twenty-two and have been suffering from this condition for a number of years. It is very embarrassing as I go to many parties and dances and naturally wear low necked gowns. If you know of any remedy please publish it in this column.
Pawtucket, R. I. "BABE."

Answer: Gooseflesh on arms or legs can be a horror to any girl. The proper treatment is to stimulate circulation by means of massage. Use a heavy flesh brush when bathing and rub briskly with a coarse towel.

A Shrewd Slam Deduction

Slam bidding is a distinct art in itself, and even with the effective device of the Four-Five Notrump Convention, a certain type of hand presents problems.

In such hands the slam depends not so much upon a number of Aces and Kings as upon a well-placed King or singleton.

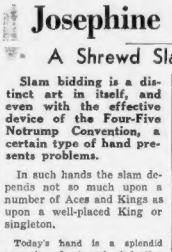
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	1◇	Pass
2♣	Pass	3◇	Pass
4♣	Pass	4♡	Pass
5♣	Pass	6♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

All of the bidding was orthodox up to the four heart bid by South. This was the crucial, and from South's point of view, the vital-information-securing-bid of the hand. He made it only after the most careful calculation of possible results and with definite purpose.

LONG IN HEARTS

For one thing, he reasoned that West must be fairly long in hearts, and if the Ace headed West's suit, he would probably double. If this happened, South would stay out of the slam. But if no double came from West, there was extreme likelihood that either North or East held the Ace, so the King would be both a trick and an entry.

Finally, even if West had the Ace, and did not double, a heart would probably not be opened by East against a club contract.

On top of all this relative to the heart Ace, South also felt sure that if North bid clubs again, instead of showing preference for South's diamonds, a singleton diamond in the North hand was most probable.

ACTION DEMANDED

There was no danger of North's passing the four-heart bid made after the previous bids. North might be in doubt as to the being a "cue-bid," but the doubt alone would demand further action. When the five-club bid came, South backed his excellent judgment by raising it to six.

The contract was made easily, North taking care to ruff out the diamond suit with high trumps, and keeping the heart King for his entry to cash the remaining three good diamonds.

MindingOwn Business

By RUBY AYRES

THERE is a very true saying that "he who minds everyone's business but his own, will soon find that he has nothing else to mind," and I think that the same sentiment applies to the gossiper.

It is seldom, if ever, that more than a grain of truth can be found in the stories which are circulated with so much relish by a Gossip.

Why do we worry so much about gossip? We all suffer from it at one time or another, and yet, as a rule, it seldom does great harm, and I have always found that the wisest and cleverest method of dealing with the unpleasantness is to laugh and to ignore it. Nothing kills a thing so surely as laughter.

The gossiper hates to be ignored; he likes to feel that he has stirred up strife and made endless trouble; it is food and drink to him to know that he has succeeded in making mischief between two perfectly harmless and innocent people.

Don't give him that satisfaction. Laugh and ignore both the gossip and the gossiper, and remember that nobody gossips with a deaf man.

Fashion Flashes

Design For Beauty

By ARLINE GOULD

FINDING A hairdresser who is able to combine the luxurious with the utilitarian is indeed an achievement these days.

It's easy enough, of course, to get someone to do you an original coiffure — little wooden sausages, fluffy bangs and all—but finding a maestro whose designs will not blow to pieces on a windy day, is something else again.

A man who prides himself on setting your wave to your particular type of beauty, is our discovery of the month. His coiffure designs are original but not too wild.

One of the nicest things about him, is his ability to brush up a nice healthy gloss. Fatuous as it may seem, he uses a comb instead of a brush after you emerge from the dryer.

A wave that has been properly set possesses elasticity enough to stand a good brushing, he says. All this business of being afraid to "comb" out your wave is just a fallacy, he believes. It's also his opinion that anyone whose hair is worthy of the effort should get a new coiffure every year.

If you really want to see what an inspired hairdress can do to you (both physically and morally), by all means investigate this artist. Formerly located in a downtown store, he is now presiding over his own salon and giving consultations to smart ladies who demand skillful and stimulating arrangements.

If your hair possesses a dead, sheenless texture and refuses to stay in curl, he will give you one of his famous reconditioning shampoos. And if this doesn't do the trick ask him for his toning rinse — something guaranteed to keep the hair flattering and young. (His machine-less oil permanent is something to really dream about.)

—POSED BY ADRIENNE AMES

While we are on the subject of hair, we might mention that many lovely ideas are found in the new winter styles. Curls are everywhere—both back and front. Adrienne Ames, Hollywood star, shows one of the new stylish arrangements, with clusters of curls at the nape of the neck and a single flat wave above. The bit of ribbon which perks up the front is exchanged for a rhinestone clip for formal wear.

To learn the name of this hairdresser who combines the luxurious with the utilitarian, call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or write to her at the Boston Evening American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

REPEAL FAILS TO CURB GRIP OF LAWLESS

Prohibition was repealed two years ago this coming Thursday, after a 13-year orgy of gangsterism.

Lou Wedemar, crime reporter of Universal Service, in co-operation with Universal Service correspondents throughout the United States, has just completed a nation-wide survey of crime conditions today compared with those of the prohibition era. His observations follow:

By LOU WEDEMAR
(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 3 (US)—The underworld is advancing!

Far from being in retreat, two years after repeal cut into their basic source of revenue—liquor profits—America's criminals are spreading into new fields, adopting new methods and increasing day by day their strangle-hold on law enforcement.

They controlled, during prohibition, police, prosecutors, prisons and the courts. They still control them.

And the public, which submitted to their extortion for thirteen years, still submits—with only here and there any organized protest.

STILL THRIVE

From coast to coast in America's biggest cities, the racketeers, gangsters, thugs, pug-uglies, gorillas, strong-arm men and chiselers of prohibition days still swagger along the sidewalk, with policemen turning their backs, and politicians holding out welcoming hands.

For not only has repeal failed to halt the illegal liquor traffic, but unscrupulous politicians, grabbing the reins dropped by fallen "public enemies," are aiding racketeers to take control of legitimate commerce and industry, and levy tolls far exceeding, in many instances, the expense to the general public during prohibition.

The most conspicuous phenomenon of prohibition era racketeering—gang murders—is not so noticeable today. Men are still being shot in the back by orders of the cowardly bosses of the underworld, but the percentage has fallen sharply.

The latter, with knowledge of the present-day underworld set-up, know that murders of gangsters by gangsters occur when the underworld is split up into rival groups—and that today's "improved" statistics indicate merely that a more perfect criminal machine is in operation.

There is seldom need to "exterminate" a rival, for today's underworld bosses are unchallenged by any rivals.

CRIME EPIDEMIC

A most sinister phenomenon has risen during the post-prohibition period—an epidemic spread of brutal crime among youths. The jails are full of youngsters scarcely out of their teens, confessed perpetrators of cold-blooded crimes.

Federal statistics show that youngsters of 24 or younger committed 6000 robberies, 16,000 burglaries and 6000 automobile thefts during the first ten months of this year.

Even more significant than that is the federal report that more than 1000 boys, 19 or younger, went out armed with revolvers, held up citizens and took money under threat of death. These youths are the cadets of the degenerate army of the underworld; they and thousands like them—who escape arrest—are the backbone of today's and tomorrow's rackets and murders.

STILL ORGANIZED

An outstanding fact, however, is this: America's underworld is still an organized machine, controlling the activities of thousands, or hundreds of thousands, of criminals, with ex-convicts sitting on the right hand of police commissioners, and on speaking terms with mayors; with every citizen, in the large cities, and many in the smaller, paying in some way at least a small sum for the maintenance of human parasites.

The set-up differs from that of prohibition only in this: crooked politicians now are the bosses, not the underlings. A compilation of statistics from local and federal authorities, insurance companies, labor union heads, and anti-crime organizations, leads to an amazing total as the estimated crime bill of the United States in 1935.

This total is set at $1,500,000,000—an average of more than $10 "gangster tax" from every American citizen.

Urges More Naval Construction Men

Washington, Dec. 3 (INS)—A renewed appeal for man-power to operate Uncle Sam's fleet came forth from the Navy today.

Rear Admiral E. S. Land, chief of the bureau of construction and repair, in his annual report, warned that the construction corps was "decidedly undermanned." He urged an immediate 20 per cent increase in personnel.

Tugwell has appointed Mrs. Dorothy M. Beck of Wilton, Conn., regional director in charge of all resettlement activities in the 11 northeastern states, it was made known here this afternoon.

Punch Tickles Broadway Ribs

New York, Dec. 3 (INS)—Broadway chuckled today as news spread that two of its better known young men, Ramon Ramos and Peppy De Albrew, had staged a fist fight in the best Latin manner.

It occurred Sunday night at a party of socialites in the apartment of Mrs. Anna Robbins.

According to best accounts, Ella Logan, whose name has been linked to that of Ramos, orchestra leader, was singing when suddenly there was a crash. Then:

"Take that, you such and such!"

"That for you, you se and se!"

A second later other guests sprang between the two belligerents and both men were subdued.

Albrew, night club promoter, man-about-town and one-time husband of Wilda Bennett of the Follies, admitted today he had taken a poke at Ramos. Swearing vengeance, he spluttered:

"Somebody was making a speech when Ramos suddenly told me to shut up. I said, 'Why should I shut up?' Then he swung at me. Only I beat him to the punch."

Ramos, whose features showed no punch mark, was less perturbed. He said:

"Miss Logan was singing and Peppy started to talk loudly and boisterously. I asked him to keep quiet. He wouldn't. I tried to stop him. After a few punches we were separated."

Mrs. Robbins, a dog fancier, admitted the battle had taken place in her apartment.

"But I didn't see it," she said. "I was out of the room."

G. O. P. Gains in 3 Connecticut Cities

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 3 (AP)—Republicans in three eastern Connecticut textile cities, Rockville, Willimantic and Putnam, surveyed their gains today after the biennial municipal elections as balloting in a four-cornered battle got under way in Meriden.

Results found the Republicans taking control of the Willimantic aldermanic board, strengthening themselves in Rockville and increasing the majority by which they gained absolute domination of the Putnam city government in 1933.

N. Y. TO SPEED NEW FLAG LAW

New York, Dec. 3 (US)—Backed by leaders of both parties, an ordinance was introduced in the board of aldermen making it a jail offense to fail to display the American flag at all public meetings.

The measure was sponsored by Alderman Murray W. Stand, Democratic floor leader, and Alderman Thomas J. Curran, Republican minority leader.

It was referred to the committee on general welfare, members of which said they would report it favorably next Tuesday. It is expected to pass by an overwhelming vote.

The measure just introduced provides a penalty of $100 fine or ten days' imprisonment or both.

Mulligan Divorce Decision Delayed

The cross-action for divorce and separate support between John F. Mulligan, Quincy steamfitting contractor, and his wife, Mrs. Agnes G. Mulligan, was taken under advisement today by Judge Joseph R. McCoole in Dedham Probate Court.

Each is seeking custody of three children and Mulligan asks an absolute divorce on grounds of infidelity, while his wife charges cruel and abusive treatment in support of her action for separate support.

Long Seeks Diesel Engine Fuel Tax

In anticipation of the use of diesel engines in the automotive industry, Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long today made his first move to include fuel used by this type of engine in the tax column.

In his annual recommendations for legislation, Long advocates a change in the gasoline tax to include "all types of liquid that may be used in a combustion type engine."

78, SHE Has Regained 'YOUTH'

"BLACK OXEN" AUTHOR TELLS

San Francisco, Dec. 3 (AP)—Sprightly, golden-haired Gertrude Atherton, the 78-year-old author of "Black Oxen," a story of a woman who regained her youth, thinks it is high time eminent subjects speak of their rejuvenation operations.

At first, she said, she considered her own case "nobody's business."

"But I tell it now," she said today in her secluded workshop apartment. "Why not? Unfortunately there has been a false emphasis on the physical aspects in most minds."

Fatigued business men, actresses and professional women whose careers demand sustained energy are the most numerous benefiters, she said, of "reactivation" operations for men and X-ray treatments for women.

Sometimes, she said, patients are under 40.

Mrs. Atherton underwent treatment twice. At 78, she moves rapidly and decisively, speaks firmly, and says she feels "as vigorous as ever" in her writing.

Scientists are not yet certain, she said, that the treament actually may prolong life.

"They told Mr. A— (she named an internationally known man) they could remove his fatigue and enable him to work at his full capacity, but they could not give him a new heart," she explained.

"I had a medical examination recently," she related, "one of those things in which they do everything to you they can think of trying to find something wrong. The doctor pronounced me '100 per cent' when it was over.

"I asked him if he couldn't see his way to giving a little credit now to reactivation. But he just changed the subject hastily and began to talk about 'my fine old stock.'"

HO ACTS TO HALT AUTONOMY PLAN

Peiping, Dec. 3 (INS)—Embodying the Nanking government's last hope of preventing North China from setting itself up as an autonomous federation under Japanese influence, War Minister Ho Ying-Ching arrived here tonight for conferences with Chinese and Japanese officials.

Coming from Nanking as the spokesman for the central government, General Ho went immediately to the old government headquarters in the imperial palace and plunged into discussion with leading North China authorities.

Major Kenji Doihara, representative of the Japanese army, credited with being the leading organizer of the pro-Japanese autonomy federation movement, indicated a willingness to meet General Ho and discuss the project by which five North China provinces would divorce themselves from Nanking and openly associate themselves with Japan.

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

I wonder whether our friends who believe in supporting the League of Nations and its sanctions at any cost did not feel at least a few qualms when the headlines on the morning after Thanksgiving Day announced the news that some hundred and twenty-five Italian aviators were ready to sacrifice their planes and their lives, each one making of himself a living bomb at close range to destroy one of the British warships in the Mediterranean.

ROBERT E. ROGERS

One is reminded of the famous trio of Japanese whose memory is venerated because they blew themselves to bits deliberately in smashing the enemy's defenses in Manchuria. There are plenty of examples of the sort in military history and the Italian airmen may very well be moved by an equal patriotism to an equal disregard of life.

A morning contemporary rather poohpoohed the story as being both impossible and unlikely. The editorial line taken was that of Judge Brack in Hedda Gabler, "People don't do such things."

U. S. Urged to Force Over League's Decree

But the evidence is clear that people do do such things—in war time. Il Duce has already shown that he was not bluffing when he began the war in the face of League threats. Now with the situation for Italy becoming more and more dangerous if the League actually does jam through England's sanctions policy on oil and coal, I do not believe that it is safe to trust that Mussolini will back down and allow himself to be bluffed out of a situation which is of the most profound concern to the future of Italy.

That is why I wonder at the calm confidence of the League supporters over here. A few days ago Miss Sarah Wambaugh of Cambridge, an acknowledged expert in League matters, urged the United States to support the most drastic sanctions on the ground that they would surely make Italy back down. And a colleague of mine at Technology, Mr. Theodore Smith, who spent the summer in Geneva and is an ardent supporter of the League, addressed a Technology group to the effect that our country should take the lead in pressing the question of sanctions in order to encourage the doubtful European countries and make it impossible for the League program to be whittled down.

But—I cannot help asking myself—how far do they who trust so strongly in what they believe to be a program of cool reason and logic understand the part played in such affairs by the imponderables—pride, self esteem, patriotism, suspicion, wounded feelings, dawning hate, fear of the future, jealousy, self respect, and the age-old individualism of the human race.

What Wilson Did Not Take Into Account

To Woodrow Wilson, half Utopian idealist, half logical theorist, it may have seemed a simple matter to impose sanctions on a belligerent, but how far did he foresee what might happen if a determined leader, embarked on a deliberate policy enthusiastically supported by his people, were to find his policy blocked, his country's future endangered, his people humiliated, through the acts of professed friends whose actions have all the appearance of self interest masquerading as idealism?

May Plunge Europe Into Another War

Possibly the League will bluff Mussolini out of it, to its great glory and reputation and, possibly, a new and peaceful world. Possibly it will not, thus turning a minor colonial conflict into a terrific European struggle. The temper of Italy and its leader makes the latter not unlikely. Nothing ventured, nothing gained, I suppose.

But I, for one, would not like to feel that I had supported an improbable ideal which carries with it the real possibility of desperate disaster, for the sake of upholding the memory of a stubborn theorist whose greatest achievement was a disastrous treaty, the results of which he thought to mend with an untried policy which was—literally!—full of dynamite.

The law of nature knows little of reason. Is it not possible that the present generation of intellectuals are over-estimating the part reason successfully can play in a world of will and instinct?

See Need To End Abuses

LIBERALISM NOT AT STAKE

(Why have Harvard students been in so many escapades that brought unfavorable publicity recently? Miss Marsters is attempting to give a fair picture of the social life of Harvard. This is her third story. The fourth will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

By ANN MARSTERS

Is a day of reckoning approaching Harvard? Must the whole student body pay and pay for the follies of a few

It would seem so, for now a goodly number of the students themselves are sharing the opinion of the college authorities that something should be done to curb the wave of drinking that is splashing over Harvard.

For the first time in the history of the college, the Harvard Crimson has been moved to comment on excessive drinking by the students.

Ann Marsters

Today's editorial takes its stand against those students who abuse their right to drink. It has in mind the meeting of the Administrative Board held for today, which is the purpose of discussing measures to put an end to such abuse

It will not be known until later what the outcome of that meeting will be—but the Crimson itself offers a few suggestions on how best to turn the drinking tide.

It is far from recommending, however, any attempt on the part of authorities to prohibit drinking

"Such a policy," says the Crimson, "would not only destroy the liberalism which Harvard fosters but would also undermine its greatness with its students. Drinking in all its forms must be permitted."

And why? Because—

"Certain aspects of college life encourage hard drinking, and to many men drinking is just as much an activity as membership on an athletic team. The ordinary man is expected to drink himself under the table at least once, whether it be an initiation, a reunion, or some sort of party."

Bravo, my lads—but where is your solution?

Immediate Action

"The college," continues the Crimson, "should launch its attack at failure to accept responsibility. When any undergraduate makes a spectacle of himself at public college functions, creates unnecessary disturbances, or endangers lives, he should be subjected to immediate disciplinary action. While basic freedom would be preserved, a man would learn that he must control himself.

"At present, official facilities are inadequate for dealing ably with such a solution. A man with human understanding, who possesses the necessary time, is urgently needed. Consequently, we favor the appointment of a new administrative officer, who would interview all students reported for abuses and pass judgment on their cases with administrative board approval.

"First, he would have to tolerate intoxication, which has no public consequences. Secondly, he would have to determine when a man is damagingly drunk."

The undergraduate body believes that if such changes were made, it would create an environment which would encourage a changed attitude at Harvard.

There's no doubt about it this time—Harvard is NOT "indifferent" to the various aspects of the drinking situation. And it is hoped that it won't be necessary for authorities to treat the students as though they were school boys who must have their knuckles rapped by teacher when they disobey.

Some of the students are prepared to be resentful of the disciplinary measures which they think might result from today's administrative board meeting.

Yesterday, authority slightly asserted itself by posting, in all the Harvard houses, copies of the rules regarding women visitors in the dormitories.

But surely nothing will be done to abolish the Harvard house parties.

And that, really, is just about all they are

A Wellesley College girl, who has attended several such parties, gave a brief description of them. (She was afraid the boys might not invite her again if she gave her name.)

"We all just sit around and drink," she said, "and nearly always the boys serve Scotch and soda. Of course, there's incidental laughing and talking—and the more we drink, the more fun we have.

"We leave at seven o'clock, unless we've had special permission to stay longer. There are certain occasions when the boys feel like celebrating, so after the girls have gone they can settle down to some serious drinking

"The boys who get VERY tight are given a cold shower and put to bed by those who manage to stay a little sober. At least, that's what I was told.

Is Old Enough

A pretty debutante, Miss Frederica Sargent of Brookline, is inclined to think that "the Harvard men are too old to be disciplined."

"I think," she said, "that by the time a boy reaches college he is old enough to have a sense of responsibility and to know how to conduct himself—whether he's drinking or not.

"Of course, if he acts like a child he should be treated as such, but I'm sure that only a very small percentage of the Harvard boys really need to be strictly disciplined.

"It isn't fair to judge all the students by the foolish conduct of a few, or for the authorities to make inclusive rules and regulations. Those who need it should be disciplined individually. The majority can take care of themselves."

(Harvard students and their friends—most of them—have no fear of serious consequences from the drinking episodes at the famous school. They rise quickly to its defense when criticism is heard. They will speak tomorrow through Ann Marsters in the Boston Evening American.)

Harvard Boys Are Pleasant Hosts

STUDENT DISCIPLINE

Harvard's administrative board met behind closed doors today amid denials that undergraduate conduct was to be discussed.

One such denial came from a spokesman in the university news office who said The Crimson had been misinformed in a statement that excessive drinking by students was to become a matter of official inquiry

The following statement was issued at Dean A. C. Hanford's office:

"The dean's office has no statement to make regarding today's meeting of the administrative board, and will have no statement to make after the meeting.

"The statement made by Dean Hanford as chairman of the administrative board last Tuesday is the only statement to be issued in connection with the question of student discipline."

This statement contained the following line

"The development of undergraduate sentiment against misconduct that disregards the rights of others and brings discredit to the college is the only permanent solution to the problem."

Many Aid Basket Fund

NEEDY PLEAS GROW DAILY

Big-hearted Bostonians, Warm-hearted residents of New England—we salute you! Your responses to the daily appeals of the Christmas Basket Fund Editor are beginning to arrive in increasing numbers.

BUT THE NEED IS GREAT. Greater than ever before in the 23 years of the Boston Evening American and Sunday Advertiser Xmas Basket Fund, it seems.

For every letter offering aid to needy New England families—five appeals arrive in the same mail. Letter—letters—letters. A litany of hopelessness and despair.

Tomorrow night at Normandie Ballroom, next door to Keith's Theater in Washington street, the Palsy-Walsy Club, composed of girl employes of the Boston American and Sunday Advertiser, sponsors the second benefit for the Basket Fund.

Joe Lally of Belmont, WAAB radio tenor, the Ritchie Twins of Wollaston, talented girl specialty dancers, and James Downey, the "Irish Thomas," of Brighton, headline the incidental program of entertainment. Tickets are priced at only 75 cents for gentlemen and 40 cents for ladies at the Normandie door.

MAYFAIR PARTY

Next Sunday evening at Club Mayfair, Benny Ginsburg's smart nightclub in Broadway, South End, will be Christmas Basket Fund Night.

Another affair at the Boston Arena—Saturday night, December 14—will benefit the Basket Fund when the annual Gala Skaters' Frolic is presented.

Two nights earlier—Thursday, December 12—at The Brunswick's beautiful Casino Room, Boylston and Clarendon streets, another Christmas Basket Fund benefit is being arranged by Managing Directors L. Marshall Thompson and Ernest Borden

CASE 6

I am writing to ask you if you will please remember me and my family with a Christmas basket. There are seven of us in the family now and I am expecting another baby early this month. My husbands works four days a week for the welfare A Christmas basket will make the children happy as we had very little for Thanksgiving.

Anyone who wants to can come to my house and see for themselves whether or not we are in need. I expect to have my light shut off very soon because I can't pay the bill.

If anyone has a crib or baby carriage I would appreciate it.

This family lives in Roxbury. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Fund Editor—Lib. 4000, and ask for Case No. 6.

CASE 7

I am an expectant mother and also have a baby two years old. I never had to apply for charity before, but my husband only works two or three days a week which makes it hard for us to get along on.

I have my little girl stay with my mother but I'd like very much to have her home for the holiday to enjoy a Christmas like others. We were forced to move into one room so as to meet expenses a little more economically.

Please don't forget us this Christmas as I do not know where to turn.

This poor mother lives in the South End. Anyone who wishes to help her may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 7.

Send in your contributions—large or small—to the Basket Fund, 5 Winthrop square, Boston—or stop in at Christmas Basket Fund headquarters, 284 Devonshire street, just off Summer street, or telephone The number is the same in either case—Liberty 4000.

Chewing Gum Helps Junior Leaguers Emote

Novelists who have lost the common touch seem to think only working girls chew gum. They should get guest cards admitting to the Vincent Club or the Junior League. When either of those blue-ribbon organizations rehearses a play, more Wrigley's is destroyed than at a convention of sewing machine girls.

It helps them to emote!

At the Posse-Nissen Reconditioning Salon on Boylston street they have a name for it. By "it" I mean that maddening roll of flesh that accumulates at the back of the neck of a lady who's getting on, and has a weakness for her victuals.

Attendants call it "the dowager's hump." If the dowager in question is husky enough, and game, they set her to work on a punching bag. Other fat-removers in favor now are electric horses, vibratory belts, and stationary bicycles. Then there's the steam cabinet, which melts it off.

Dieting is on the wane. Constance Shields and Eleanor Thomas, who run the place, advise their ladies that good, old fashioned exercise is the safest and surest way to regain that girlish figure.

Beacon Hill Denizen Solves Paving Mystery

An unimaginative citizen who has lived in West Cedar street for upward of fifty years has just cleared up a mystery. Down through the decades, he's puzzled over the seasonal influx of cars from strange parts.

The other day, he asked a man from Iowa what he'd come to see. The tourist told him he wanted a look at Acorn street, a cobbled lane, dating back to pre-Revolutionary days. It was a cow path when Beacon Hill residents pastured their cattle on the Common.

"Imagine that!" marvelled the unimaginative one, "Across the country to rubber at a street that ain't even paved!"

CHURCH DEFIES NAZIS, ORDERS 5 MINISTERS

Berlin, Dec. 3 (AP)—Leaders of Germany's Protestant Confessional Synod defied the Nazi regime today by ordaining five Theological students as ministers.

Despite an order by Hans Kerrl Reichsfuehrer Hitler's head of the department of church affairs, that the confessional synod ordain no more ministers, the ordination ceremonies were carried out with determined and methodical calm.

Rev. Otto Dibelius, assisted by Rev. Martin Niemoeller, leader of the organization which opposes the Nazi administration of church matters, administered the oath to the new pastor in St. Anne's church.

If the government intends to take drastic action against the group there were no signs of such action following the ceremony. Rev Herr Niemoeller went back to the parish house where he instructed his class in theology as usual.

In his sermon to the congregation, Rev. Herr Dibelius took as his text Elijah's flight into the desert.

"We believe," he said, "there will always be those biblical seven thousand who do not bend their knees before the false gods."

Fourth Set of Twins Brings Total to 14

MRS. WILLIAM HAUSEN JAMES JERRY

This 43-year-old Chicago mother, Mrs. William Hausen, has given birth to her fourth set of twins. Her latest pair, two boys, James and Jerry, bring the total number of children to 14. If the new set of twins had been girls instead of boys, there would have been an exact ballance of sexes, seven of each. However, Daddy Hausen says he's satisfied, because there's just enough boys for a baseball team now.

WAYSIDE INN ROBBERY TIP WINS $25

By the News Tip Editor

When thieves looted an automobile near the famous Wayside Inn in Sudbury of $5000 in jewels, the Boston Evening American was the first paper to print the story.

A news tip made the story possible in such short time. The tipster was selected for this week's Boston American-Sunday Advertiser tip news tip award of $25.

Two persons, each with a different angle on the marriage of Rose Kneilar, former fiance of Abe Faber, split this week's second prize, each obtaining $3.

The split was made because neither had enough for a story in itself, nor could we have run down the facts without both tips. But between them, unknown to each other, they gave this paper an exclusive story

Third prize of $3 was split this week, too, $1 going to an 18-year-old youth who recognized the vast public interest in the possibility that the ERA-WPA head, Arthur G. Rotch, might be ousted, and phoned the American with the tip.

Two dollars was paid to a 10-year-old schoolboy who phoned in a tip on the mysterious death of a Jamaica Plain schoolboy.

In addition, 10 awards of $1 each were paid out for good news tips.

A truck driver told us about two Everett stories.

An employe of a coal company told us about the discovery of the body of a woman in Quincy.

An automobile mechanic witnessed the death of a small girl killed by a truck in Chelsea; immediately he phoned the American of the accident.

One person in a crowd of watchers phoned us when the body of a man was recovered from Flax pond.

The driver of an oil truck who was on the spot told us about a woman who fell forty feet in Everett.

HEATER EXPLOSION

An engineer who witnessed a drowning in Somerville rushed to the phone and called us.

Henry Ford had Thanksgiving Dinner at Wayside Inn. He is always good to us, and as alert tipster realized it. His call netted him a prize.

The recovery of a lost dog, was learned and phoned in to us, rewarding the observer.

BAR LIVERMORE AND EX-WIFE FROM BOY

Santa Barbara, Cal., Dec. 3 (INS)—While prosecutors and attorneys wrangled over the forthcoming trial of Mrs. Dorothea Livermore, charged with shooting her son, two doctors today took the law into themselves and placed a 24-hour guard at the hospital door of the boy with instructions to refuse admittance to everyone, including the mother and father.

At the same time, Mrs. Livermore, former wife of Jesse Livermore, Wall street plunger, also was excluded from seeing her other son, Paul, 14, who is with the father at the exclusive El Mirasol Hotel.

Meanwhile the victim of the "dare shooting," Jesse Livermore, Jr., 16, was removed from the oxygen tent and reported to have "little better than an even chance" to recover if no more complications set in."

Today Mrs. Livermore was reported recuperating at Montecito but was visibly worried over not being able to see the son she shot during an alleged drunken dispute.

"I want to see my boy at once," she said. "He is all the world to me—I know he'll want me to come. He's probably wondering why I haven't been there. I have to see him—even if it is only to say hello—to tell him how much I love him. How sorry I am that this accident happened."

HER CELLMATES

Mrs. Livermore was released on $6000 property bond arranged by her fiance, Donald B. Neville, Jr., yesterday after a harrowing week's end in jail with another white woman, held on drunkenness charges, and a Mexican vagrant.

G.O.P. Love Feast Opens 1936 Drive

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Republican managers, having consolidated gains made in recent special and municipal elections at a victory dinner in Chamber of Commerce banquet hall, squared off today for the main objectives in the 1936 campaign — recapture of the State for the G. O. P.

Acclaims to the seven victors were mingled with broadsides against "Curleyism," a denunciation of Councillor Daniel H. Coakley and renewed challenges to Chairman Joseph McGrath and former Chairman Charles H. McGlue of the Democratic State Committee.

More than 600 party workers from every section of the state gathered to do honor to Dewey G. Archambault of Lowell, Leslie E. Kenyon of Somerville, Walter J. Cookson of Worcester, Frank E. Lewis of Everett, new Republican mayors-elect, and to Senator William H. McSweeney of Salem, and Representatives William Stockwell of Maynard and Axel U. Sternlof of Worcester, newly elected members of the Legislature.

Held under the auspices of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, it lacked the sour taste that followed the same club's recent semi-annual meeting at the Statler Hotel when Councillor Winfield Schuster of Douglas demanded leaders who could appeal to the common masses.

LANDON BACKED BY CURTIS

Topeka, Kas., Dec. 3 (US)—Charles Curtis, Vice-President of the United States in the Hoover administration, had today returned to his native state to help Governor Alf Landon secure the Republican presidential nomination next year.

Regarding 1936 possibilities, Curtis said

"In the last few months the Republican outlook has become far brighter. Roosevelt undoubtedly is slipping, due to lack of public confidence in his policies.

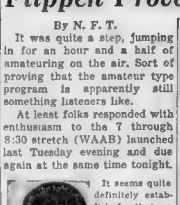
"Since my announcement that I am for Landon as the Republican choice my secretary has been kept busy answering many inquiries to me about him. Senator Borah is also a possible candidate and has strong backing, but Landon can defeat him if the proper organization is effected."

Radio Amateurs Under Flippen Prove Alluring

By N. F. T.

It was quite a step, jumping in for an hour and a half of amateuring on the air. Sort of proving that the amateur type program is apparently still something listeners like.

At least folks responded with enthusiasm to the 7 through 8:30 stretch (WAAB) launched last Tuesday evening and due again at the same time tonight.



"N. F. T." WAAB setting. Flippen is a fast thinker and witty as they come. Accordingly, the show moves along not too swiftly to be smooth and satisfying all around.

Woe to the would-be amateur comic who tries to tangle Colonel Flippen or even frustrate him. He has his new "mike" offering staged under Schanley auspices and all indications are that it will win its way as a real Tuesday night highlight on the air. Voting is by telephone.

SECRET AGENT STAR

Instead of the foregoing feature, or at 8:30 to be exact, the Boston Evening American turn with "Uncle Newt" and his Secret Agent X-9 doings for boys and girls, brings little Frances Avena to the microphone again.

Frances has appeared previously with "Uncle Newt" and Joe Lelly and Ruth Hanson on this popular juvenile quarter-hour.

Fan mail requests cause the return engagement. They call her "The Baby Blues Singer" and her song styling justifies the billing.

* * *

Ben and "all the lads" are appearing in person behind Keith-Boston Theater footlights and will go coasting-to-coasting this evening through WBZ studio facilities.

In place of this robust outdoor activity they plan to open America's first beauty parlor for men.

This is said to be what will happen when the weekly "Caravan" is holding forth (WNAC) tonight from 9:00 to 9.30.

The classic Monologue from Act II of Moussorgsky's opera masterpiece, "Boris Godunoff," will be sung by Lawrence Tibbett, noted network baritone, with Don Voorhees' Orchestra on the concert program where he stars (WNAC) this evening between 8 30 and 9 o'clock.

Rogers "Tag Day" December 14

Greater Boston cities and towns and communities throughout the state are completing plans for activities on the Will Rogers Memorial "Tag Day" to be held December 14.

Gifts are already being sent in to the committee in charge of the fund and the Tag Day donations are expected to swell the total.

Boxes and arm bands have been prepared for collectors. All boxes are to be opened only by the State Street Trust Company, depository for the State Memorial committee.

Organization of all the counties of the state has been completed. Theater people are prepared to do their bit for the memorial and have already manifested their interest by contributions. Mary Young and her players at Copley Theater have presented a check for $165.82, collections during performances of the past week.

Others engaged in theatrical work here have offered their services in a radio program to be presented next Sunday over Station WNAC.

Funds Held Up

Transfer of funds from some school account to another has been postponed until next week's school committee meeting. Unavoidable absence of Dr. Charles E. Mackey made a vote on the transfer impossible.

St. Pete Boosters Turn Cold Shoulder to Braves

Austen Lake

THOSE UP-AND-AT-'EM business boosters of St. Petersburg, Fla., which are the most aggressive homebodies known to man, are conspiring to give the raggety Braves the gypsy-hustle. The gypsy-hustle is Florida language for the bum's rush.

It turns up that the St. Pete commercial papas want to install the Chicago Cubs in the Braves' comfortable Waterfront ball park, over which the city is landlord.

Feeling that the busted Braves have slipped socially and can no longer draw the tourist mobs, the Chamber daddies wish to tweeze them loose from the prettiest winter training site in the South by no later than 1937.

Such is gratitude beside the laughing waters of Tampa Bay. The Braves virtually discovered St. Pete in the pre-boom days when it was little more than a tickety fishing village, with a seaweed shore, shacks on stilts and a tumbledown main street.

Palmetto, saw-grass an dthe wild cocoanut flourished where now imposing hotel colonies have sprouted, and elevator lights go clickering up and down the shaftways of the sky towers.

But in the old time rattlesnakes and cottonmouth moccasins, as inner tubes, and such ominous livestock as alligators were the loose a biscuit toss from the city's lazy life.

The gawdy luxury of coastal Florida had not been born, and inter spending of the tourist horde was not yet the principal industry.

Give Braves Credit Then

CAMP THE BRAVES, WHEN the Chamber of Commerce optimists were offering inducements to club owners for the privilege of entertaining their troupes for five or six weeks.

There were special rates at the hotel, a free ball yard and a silver cornet band to greet the athletes at the train and play them around the village plaza in a grand parade of welcome.

There were pert speeches by the boosters' committee, salted with witty turns, and concluding with the prediction that, within four years, the Sunshine City would be the Riviera of Hootchee-cochee County.

During the ensuing years I have heard the home-town boosters rise at Judge Fuchs' dinners and make the he-man, howdy-brother confessions that it was the Braves and the springtime news pieces which acquainted New Englanders with the healing qualities of the St. Pete sun and brought them tumbling down to spend money and roost the winter away on the street benches.

If this was so then, it would seem to be so now. Yet the boosters wish to tap new tourist funds from Chicago, where the spending power is said to be practical virginal. And without saying anything to the busted Braves, they are coaxing the Cubs to come down a year hence and bring a new army of sun worshippers with plenty of fresh funds.

If the Cubs consent, the Braves will be asked to go further into America's last geographical frontier and open up a new town.

Booed O'Hara Turns Booer

AS CONTROLLING OWNER and operator of Narragansett's horse park, Walter O'Hara has often heard the outraged screech of investors over real or imaginary race larceny. He has stood on his clubhouse roof and listened while the throng poured out its soul.

There were times when even Walter's ears, which are pretty robust ears, were pink above the amplified mob moans.

So the other day at Bowie, where O'Hara has been paying back to the pari-mutuel windows much of his New England race earnings, he sat by while Maryland horse lovers raised their hearts and voices in a grand hymn of hate.

It was the first time, he explained, that he has had a chance to be a pitcher instead of a catcher in a spasm of crowd nausea. He said he rather liked the sensation.

Alabama Comes to Boston

PUBLICITY'S PULLING FORCE will be measured at the Boston Arena, December 12, when Alabama Pitts, Ossining's leading alumnus, arrives with an All-Star basketball team to play a mercenary game with the Boston Trojans.

Now Pitts may be no greater shakes as a basketball player than he showed himself to be as a baseball and football player. But as a sport page topic he has become a national figure and a sure-fire turnstile lure.

The aura of oddity, which we sport authors term "color," is one of those indefinable qualities that defies explanation. Whatever there is in an athlete's personality that appeals to public imagination, fed by newspaper repetition, fixes the man's value as a gate attraction.

With Pitts it is the somber, romantic background of the big Granite House and the appeal to popular fair play when he was momentarily barred from League ball.

With Joe Louis it is the cold, inscrutable ferocity and silent menace. With Babe Ruth it was the small-boy absence of responsibility and human penseroso. With Max Baer and Dizzy Dean it was the blatant cockiness and gift for clowning.

Yet athletic color has public appeal only briefly, unless it is laid over ability. Without skill, as in the case of Art Shires and Max Baer, color soon peals off and shows the shoddy base.

Thus a man like Jimmy Foxx, who is devoid of personality's pigment, weathers the years long after the crack-pot daffies and oddities have faded into the limbo of public forgetfulness.

The Gehrigs rest at the Copley-Plaza. It was a surprise visit. But the Boston Evening American was right on the job and got an exclusive interview with the mighty slugger. Gehrig and his wife will stay here for a couple of days.

Runaway Race If They Come

Cramer, Higgins and Foxx Would Assure Pennant

By Joe Cashman

"The acquisition of Foxx, Cramer and Higgins would make the Red Sox the most dangerous club in baseball!" stated Lou Gehrig, Yankee home run king, in an exclusive interview with the Boston Evening American today.

Columbia Lou, who holds undisputed claim to the title of baseball's iron man" by virtue of his string of 1600-odd consecutive games since June 1, 1925, is at the Copley-Plaza with his bride, Rita, and Mrs. Gehrig's mother, Mrs. Nellie Twitchell.

Lou and Mrs. Gehrig are paying their annual visit to their dear friends Austen Lakes.

"What's more," Gehrig went on, "the Sox don't need these stars to be dangerous. It's just as I said a year ago when we were returning from Japan and our world tour. All the experts were claiming the pennant for Cleveland. I asked, then, 'How can you count the hits out?' and I am proposing the same question now, without having the slightest idea of what trades have been or will be made.

FOXX'S HITTING

"It was merely a question, then, of the Big Fellow—Robert Moses Grove—having a good year, of Cronin playing his regular game, of Walberg coming through.

"Had all three happened, the Sox wouldn't have been counted out. Just take ten games off the loss column and add them on to the win—and there's the pennant.

"Even if the Sox get only 'little Foxxie'—and Gehrig smiled. In that smile your correspondent could see the tremendous batting punch 'little Foxxie' would add to the Sox's attack—home runs sailing over the fanning left field wall, doubles splattering against the barrier in center field—and runs streaming across the plate, the runs which the Sox hitters didn't receive on so many occasions last summer [illegible] are however doubted that there would be a wholesale transfer of the Philadelphia stars to the Bronx or to any one team.

"How about it?" he asked "I've read so much about these trades. First they're on—and then they're denied."

Our reply, too, was said in the definite

"Old Connie is a shrewd trader" said Gehrig "He might hesitate to sell his stars to one team if he thought it would make a runaway of the race.

"Add the Athletics to the present Red Sox—and the race wouldn't even start

"If Connie actually is going to sell or trade, he probably will scatter his aces as he did before, even though the Red Sox receive the lion's share.

"But if the Sox start the season with Foxx, Cramer and Higgins—and win the pennant, it'll be nothing less than they—and Boston—deserve. For Boston undoubtedly is the finest baseball city in the country.

"I remember our final visit here. The season practically was over. There was nothing depending upon the outcome of the game. The Sox had but the barest chance of overcoming Cleveland for fourth place.

"And yet the attendance fell just short of 50,000, while between five and ten thousand additional fans were turned away.

"I know because I was caught in the crowd, coming late to the park. The streets were jammed everywhere. I had to fight my way through the crowd, trying to get in the back way without being recognized

"A city like that, which loves and supports baseball the way Boston does deserves a pennant—and nothing less."

RADIATOR 'HOT,' SAYS WILSON

Gentleman Tops First Field

By Dave Wilson
(Selections made for fast track)
BEST BET—RADIATOR

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 3—Radiator needs only to find the short way home in order to drub a lowly field of platers opposing him in the seven furlongs of the second stanza here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST—GENTLEMAN, POVEL, FASHION QUEEN

GENTLEMAN will be no gentleman if he fails to earn brackets here. This juvenile has trained exceptionally well and figures to win at the first asking. POVEL is from the Selby Burch barn and was shipped here for a killing. He figures to offer the sternest sort of contention. FASHION QUEEN is a possibility on smart morning workouts.

SECOND—RADIATOR, SUN DROPS, GIFTED LADY

RADIATOR will be coming up fit and ready to run the race of his life. The opposition is by far the weakest he has ever encountered. SUN DROPS was a clever winner on opening day. He figures to offer the contention if sent right back. GIFTED LADY outclassed the others.

THIRD—SMALL CHANGE, CANTERSINE, STOOL PIGEON

Just can't pass up SMALL CHANGE in searching for the winner here. This plater is extremely partial to the track and was some sort of a champion at the last session. The work tab shows that he will be coming up razor sharp. CANTERSINE holds plenty of class and should furnish the top one with plenty of trouble if able to stay in the turns. STOOL PIGEON is highly fancied by his clockers.

FOURTH—JINNEE, TULEYRIES WAND, MUCHO GUSTO

JINNEE, a galloping winner on opening day, needs only to duplicate that most recent endeavor in order to grace the winner's circle in this number. In the event she fails to parade postwards Dana's string along with TULEYRIES WAND. The latter was a clever winner at Bowie. She is very fond of the track. MUCHO GUSTO for the remainder.

FIFTH—MASTER LAD, SUNNED, PURPLED FLAG

MASTER LAD looks all over a winner on recent good Maryland races. Just looks like a question of him finding the short route home. SUNNED is clearly the speed of the party. He figures to hang on long enough to save the place from PURPLED FLAG.

SIXTH—BROKHEATEN, DARK LOVELINESS, SPEAR

Just a lot of tripe here. The winner may turn up in BROWENTEN. The latter's recent form hasn't been so hot, but there's nothing to suggest that he will show a world of improvement. DARK LOVELINESS figures to offer the contention. She turned in a corking third to Feuette on opening day. SPEARE figures next best.

SEVENTH—HELEN BAB, GOLDEN PLAY, POLITEN

This is another tough spot to go searching for a winner. HELEN BAB didn't do at all badly in her New England races. She is fond of this racing strip and may score under good handling. GOLDEN PLAY was a galloping winner over a weaker lot on opening day and figures next best. POLITEN must be accorded a royal chance on the strength of a corking Bowie victory.

TECH In Triangular REGATTA

Tech, Yale and Syracuse University will participate in a new annual intercollegiate Henley regatta, to be held on Lake Quinsigamond, at Worcester, Mass., on April 25, it was announced today.

The regatta, which is being named in honor of the late Dr. Allan Winter Rowe, is open to all college members of the American Rowing Association. To date, only Yale and Syracuse have accepted Tech's invitation to participate. Tech and Yale have raced on the Worcester lake for the past two years.

A trophy known as the Rowe Memorial Cup was donated to the M. I. T. Athletic Association by Charles Hayden, prominent New York alumnus. The cup has been placed in perpetual competition, to be kept by the winner of each race for one year.

SOX First Test MAR. 14

SPRING SERIES ANNOUNCED

By Joe Cashman

Winter hasn't arrived officially as yet, but evidence arrives today that spring isn't so far away.

The Fenway flock will open its pre-season grind against the Washington Senators at Orlando, Fla., on Saturday, March 14, and will have but three days off from that time until they close the city series with the Braves in Boston on Sunday, April 12.

The Croninmen have 27 contests carded in all, 20 of them against major league nines. Nine of the tilts will be played at Sarasota, Sox training site.

PLAY CUBS

There'll be no Sox-Braves games in the Southland next season. The city series will be confined to three local contests.

Among the newcomers on the Sox schedule are the Chicago Cubs, National League champions, who will barnstorm through Florida after training out at Catalina Island in the Pacific.

The Windy City entry is booked for three games, the first will be played at Sarasota on April 2, the Sox last day in camp. The next afternoon the two clubs will perform at Thomasville, Ga.

From there the Sox will make their annual two-day pilgrimage to Birmingham. Then they'll hop over to Gadsden, Ala., for the third tilt with the Cubs.

FACE H. C.

On the northward trek from Gadsden, the Fenway flock will play only three games. They'll visit Chattanooga and Richmond and their final warm-up for the engagements with the Tribe will be a game with Holy Cross at Worcester, April 9.

The next day Boston fans will be afforded their first peek at both their major league entries for 1936

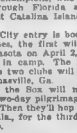
A Champ Who Came Back

Joan Tozzer, 1933 National Novice singles skating champion, prepares for her appearance at the Skaters' Frolic, charity ice carnival at the Boston Arena on December 14. Miss Tozzer sustained a fractured ankle a year ago, but has come back and now is better than ever. She's headed for national honors.

Gridders Bolster B. C. Sextet

Coach Snooks Kelley's Boston College hockey team will be greatly strengthened today by the addition of several fine players who have just hung up their moleskins.

Captain Fred Moore, star center on the Eagle sextet for the past two years, heads the list of returning skaters. Fred was a substitute center on Coach Harry Downer football team.



Fred Moore

He entered the Holy Cross game final minutes to make his letter.

Jocko Conlon, substitute fullback and crack wing on the B. C. second line last season, is another whose return will greatly add to Coach Kelley's power.

John Janusas, hailed by Coach Downer as the best tackle on the field in the Holy Cross game, will report as a defenseman as will Jerry Cullen, 6 foot, 4-inch, 206-pound giant, another grid tackle.

Boys' Club Seeks School Quintets

Athletic Director Warren McCully of the Boys' Club of Boston, Roxbury district, would like to arrange a schedule of games for leading high school, prep and college freshmen quintets during the coming season.

The Roxbury branch of the Boys' Clubs has had one of the leading basketball teams in Boston for several years under the guidance of McCully.

NEWSIES TO PLAY

The Burroughs Newsboys Foundation Varsity will play their strong Riverbank Club of Cambridge tomorrow evening at the Foundation gym, Somerset street.

Among the stars of the Riverbank Club will be George Kleevis, former Rindge Tech captain; Pat Riley, Tony Supiel and Tom Watson. The Newsies will have the usual lineup of Ben Fiaxman, Sam Weisbaum, A. Kaspar and A. Vararo.

McCOY'S 'Managers' SMART

SHOWS WARES TO OPPONENT

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Bernie Bierman spent a day in town, but got away before reporters could ask him if U. C. L. A. and Southern California are trying to lure him away from Minnesota.

Al McCoy isn't throwing any alibis, but it's the truth he worked in gym two hours on the day of his fight with Jock McAvoy to lose two pounds and protect a $1000 weight forfeit . . . Cheer up, Speerfish!

There'll be another Rose Bowl game in 1937 . . . Pop Warner will try to make a football player next season out of Eulace Peacock, Negro track star.

Miller Wants $10,000

Yep, it hits 'em hard . . . Dr. Issy Balinkin of Cincinnati is a physicist given to theories of wave motions and such . . . Last season the baseball bug bit him . . . Now he has figured out a graph that pictures club standings at any time. games won and lost and when. straight wins or losses, comparative performances and a team's chances of overtaking the leaders . . . In other words, everything except what the next pitch is going to be.

The reason Freddie Miller isn't doing any business around New York is because he demands a flat $10,000 guarantee to defend his N. B. A. featherweight title here . . . Says he can get the dough in France . . . The gossip columns say Paulino Uscudun is wanting to be married before Joe Louis completely ruins his face . . . Mike Confesses

After inhaling his fifth bottle of beer aboard the New Haven special, Mike Meske broke down and told the Yale entertainment committee he was some other guy who charged out of the Princeton stands and lined up with Dartmouth.

Ducky Pond Reappointed Yale Coach

New Haven, Ct., Dec. 3 (AP)—The Yale varsity football coaching staff, headed by Raymond W. (Ducky) Pond, was reappointed today together with the entire corps of junior varsity coaches.

Eli athletic officials did not announce the terms under which Pond will return in 1936 for his third successive year, but it was generally thought his reappointment as well as that of his associates was for one year.

Besides Pond, whose eleven this year won only three nine games, the varsity coaching staff comprises Earl (Greasy) Neale, backfield coach; Denny Myers, who has been in charge of the line, and Ivan Williamson, end coach.

Pond, who succeeded Reggie Root as head coach in 1934, got off to a flying start during his first year by turning out an eleven which won the Ivy League championship. This year the Elis defeated Harvard, but lost to Princeton.

A former backfield star, Pond has kept unblemished his record against the Crimson, both as a player and coach. Every eleven he played on as an undergraduate defeated Harvard.

The Elis will meet Cornell, Pennsylvania, Navy, Rutgers, Dartmouth, Brown, Princeton and Harvard in 1936.

LARGE TURNOUT Of Tech Matmen

Coach Jay Ricks will have the largest turnout he has ever seen for the all-Tech wrestling tournament Thursday and Friday. More than 30 men have already signed. This will give Ricks his first chance to watch his freshmen and new varsity candidates in competition.

HANLEY BLASTED BY B. U. NEWS

For Favoring Sophs

The Boston University News, undergraduate weekly, startled B. U. officials and students today with a scorching denunciation of Coach Pat Hanley's choice of gridiron players for the trip to Miami, Fla., last week.

The News especially took Hanley to task for not choosing Syd Borofsky of Dorchester, senior and three-year grid veteran, as a member of the group of 28 who clashed with Miami University last Friday night.

The News said:

"We have it from a source that is practically official that the reason Borofsky was left out of the trip in favor of at least a half a dozen athletes who thus far have contributed little to the team's success other than warming an already overwarmed bench, was because Hanley did not feel that Borofsky gave his all for the team."

RIDICULOUS

"If that is true, and we have every reason to believe Hanley said it, it is one of the most ridiculous statements ever to come out of a university athletic office, and those who have been around this school more than a year can appreciate that some very funny statements have come out of the sanctum at 208 (where the athletic office is located)."

The gridsters were due to arrive from Florida today. Pat Hanley, however, is taking a brief rest at Miami, and could not be reached for a statement.

MODEL

Heatedly lauding the athletic record of Borofsky:

"Borofsky does not smoke. He has never been known to take a drink. He showed up at practice when his injuries gave him plenty of excuse not to. For three years he has been out there playing hard, clean football. He certainly can take orders. In fact, he is the one player on the whole squad of 60 who can absolutely, successfully refute any accusation of not trying.

"Borofsky is a senior. He has played his last football game for Boston University. As it seems he is working hard to make the varsity hockey team, and from present indications, undoubtedly will. To speak to him you would never know that he almost had his heart broken last week when Pat Hanley read off the much discussed list of those lucky fellows who could make the trip to Florida."

POOR JUDGE

The News then turned again to Hanley and declared:

"You are a very poor judge of human nature. If it is your policy to overlook men who gave their all in favor of those who are yet to give their all, very well. But if you believe in justice and if you don't think winning a football game is more important than teaching your boys the cardinal principles of affection and respect and virtue, then what's the big idea?

"It can't be that you felt Borofsky was not in shape. We have his performance in the B. C. game and Joe DiMasi's (trainer) statement to confirm that away.

"Or was it that you thought it necessary to hold out a big sugar plum to your sophomores as a reward for their condescension to play? It can't be that you are afraid that some of them won't come back next year, can it?

"Maybe, Pat, it would be a good idea not to book any more trips like that. As a matter of fact, we have more than a suspicion that some of the boys laid down during the B. C. game for fear they would be hurt and be ineligible to take the trip.

"So remember, Pat, your sophs will be seniors some day. And what they can look forward to may be a repetition of the Borofsky incident."

STANFORD COACH To Scout S. M. U.

Palo Alto, Calif., Dec. 3—Claude B. (Tiny) Thornhill, Stanford coach, will personally scout Southern Methodist University Saturday in hopes of making his team's third Rose Bowl venture a winning one.

Thornhill will be in the stands when Southern Methodist meets Texas A. & M. next Saturday.

Freight

Mode of Travel for Freshmen

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 3 (AP)—Members of the freshman football squad at Southern Methodist University had it figured out how they could make the round trip to the Rose Bowl for $2.50 each.

Their plans called for chartering two freight cars and hooking them to one of several passenger trains going to Pasadena.

Railroad officials, however, didn't share their enthusiasm, explaining a side-door Pullman couldn't be hauled with a special train; that it wasn't in keeping with Interstate Commerce Commission rules, and that even though they were known as "mustangs" on the gridiron, they were humans and couldn't be carried in box cars.

U. S. Seeks $27,000 Tax At Agawam

With reorganization plans of the Agawam Racing and Breeding Association only three weeks under way, the association was confronted with a new headache today—a $27,000 federal tax headache—the Boston Evening American learned.

The reorganization plans are due to come to a head on December 25, but within the past 24 hours, it is understood, the internal revenue collector for Massachusetts has demanded the tax payment due Saturday.

These are taxes due on admissions and clubhouse assessments on patrons for the first race meet of the association, which ended October 31, and were collected by internal revenue agents who were on duty at the Agawam gates during the meet.

More than 200,000 patrons passed through the turnstiles at Agawam during the meet. With a 10 cent tax charge on all grandstand admissions and a 23 cent charge for clubhouse admissions, the total is in the vicinity of $27,000.

The racing association is also declared to owe the state $9000 as its share of the proceeds, an amount paid the state by a check which later "bounced."

Many other complaints of worthless checks given have been made, including one yesterday by the Christmas family of horse owners, who claim they received $11,000 in worthless checks from the association

Reports of internal revenue field agents were filed with the federal department within a few days of the track's closing, but under the law the operators of a place of amusement are allowed 30 days before payment of the tax is demanded.

Agawam's 30 days of grace expired last Saturday and the demand followed immediately.

Attempts by government officials to locate Lou Smith, managing director of the track, and Edward McManus, "Eddie Mack," former Boston fight promoter and now Smith's personal representative, brought the answer that both are now in Texas.

Hard Haid

Pomp'n Lakes, N. J., Dec. 3 (UP)—Joe Louis doesn't believe Paulino Uscudun can go fifteen heats with him a week from Friday night at the Garden, but for the first time since he began his knockout streak he hesitates about naming the round that will end the fight.

Louis said:

"They tell me this Paulie sure has got a hard haid. You can't tell about a man like that."

Mr. Boston Turf Checks Bouncing

By JACK CONWAY

SPEAKING of news: Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Jr., received a "rubber" check for $10,000 when Discovery won the highly advertised handicap race at the Coney Island track, Cincinnati.

The track went into the hands of receivers a few days after Discovery showed his heels to the rest of the field in the $10,000 race.

• • •

Mr. Boston

• • •

Vanderbilt could take the $10,000 loss much better than some of the horsemen who are still waiting to be paid for their races at Agawam.

• • •

Dan O'Mahoney has signed a contract to defend his title as world heavyweight wrestling champion under the direction of Paul Bowser at the Garden on December 13. The Irishman has given Bowser the right to name his opponent for the championship tussle.

• • •

Hans Steinke, German heavyweight; Ray Steele, who tossed Kingfish Levinsky in 30 seconds in a mixed bout, and Chief Little Wolf are the three men from whom Bowser is likely to select Danno's next mat rival.

• • •

Jack Sharkey will act as referee for the feature bouts which will find Al Vantres battling Ted Germains and Chief War Eagle in action against Bill Dolan.

BRAVES

Adams has made it quite clear that he intends to see that the creditors of the Braves are paid 100 cents on a dollar.

• • •

Adams would like to see Major Francis F. Murphy and his group take over control of the Tribe. He knows such a move would mean better times at the Wigwam.

In the event Major Murphy does not wish to assume this responsibility, Adams is prepared to step aside in favor of any reliable financial group.

• • •

Adams asserts he is willing to remain in the Braves picture as a minority stockholder, but would get out entirely if the proper business arrangements could be made.

• • •

Adams does not believe he will be able to get out of the Braves at this time, and is going ahead with 1936 plans which call for Bob Quinn as General Manager and Bill McKechnie as manager.

• • •

If the jumbled affairs of the Braves can be adjusted before the National league meeting in Chicago, Hedges will have an opportunity to obtain players he needs.

• • •

AL McCOY

AL McCOY won his way into the hearts of New York fans by the way he got up off the floor to almost beat Jock McAvoy of England in their bout in the New York Garden.

McCoy carried the fight to McAvoy in the latter stages of the tussle, and had the last round by a wide margin. If the tussle had lasted for two more rounds, McCoy would probably have won.

MORENZ HERE WITH HAWKS TONIGHT

By Bill Grimes

After breaking even with two New York teams, the Bruins are ready for the flying Chicago Blackhawks, whom they meet tonight at Boston Garden.

The victory over the Rangers gave the Bruins some much needed confidence, which had been waning rapidly since they went into their scoring slump.

They now believe that they have started to hit their stride and will soon be fighting for the lead in their division.

Manager Frank Patrick is not satisfied with some of his charges and is seeking re-enforcements, but they will not arrive until after the Bruins return from Chicago next week.

There are two or three vulnerable spots which must be strengthened, and negotiations are now underway to remedy the situation.

BESLER PLAYS

With Alex Motter out of the lineup, Phil Besler will be used on the third line with Peggy O'Neil and Bill Cowley.

Manager Patrick will open with the Weiland line, which will oppose Dave Morens, Mush March and Eddie Ouellette, a sensational young Hawk, from the International League.

With the exception of Ouellette, the starting lines will be composed of veterans.

Now that Cooney Weiland and Red Beattie have scored, "Dit" Clapper is due to break through with a marker or two. Dit needs only one break to get him started. When he goes, the Bruins should be off.

NEW GOALIE

Max Kaminsky will center for the second line, which will have Charlie Sands and Jerry Shannon on the wings. Any time Sands is on the ice, the Bruins are a scoring threat, for the former Maple Leaf is a goal getter and the best back check on the squad.

Manager Clem Loughlin is piloting a typical Blackhawk club. Without an exception, the Hawk forwards are two-way players. They can match speed with any outfit in the N. H. L., and come through with many victories because they skate opponents off their feet.

The Blackhawks will show a new goalie in Mike Karakas. Mike was signed to be the spare goal minder, but Lorne Chabot, the veterans goalie joined the hospital squad and has been out all season.

Karakas has done a remarkable job in the Chicago nets. Not only are the Hawks in first place of the American Division, but Mike has turned in no less than three shutouts.

Game Out

Whitman and Canton, undefeated and untied, will not meet in a post-season game, as reported.

Whitman, coached by Carl Etelman, Tufts star a decade back, has not been defeated in its last 16 starts.

Rams Refuse Sugar Bowl Offer

New York, Dec. 3 (AP)—Fordham University will not play in the Sugar Bowl football game in New Orleans New Year's Day, university authorities announced today.

Jack Coffey, Fordham's graduate manager of athletics, said Fordham athletic authorities were apprised yesterday by representatives of the committee in charge of the game. Objection to Fordham's participation in the post-season contest was voiced by the Very Rev. Aloysius J. Hogan, S. J., president of the university.

"Fordham athletic authorities admit they have been approached by representatives of the committee in charge of the game to be played in New Orleans on January first," Coffey said in a prepared statement.

"While appreciating the consideration given by the committee the president of Fordham has informed representatives of the committee that he has disapproved Fordham's participation."

Ever since Fordham routed the previously unbeaten and untied New York University team 21-0 on Thanksgiving Day the Bronx Rams were regarded as the East's leading candidate to play in the intersectional holiday contest.

The victory over N. Y. U. enabled Fordham to complete a difficult nine-game schedule with a defeat by Purdue, ties with St. Mary's and Pittsburgh, and six victories.

With Fordham definitely out of the running, either Nebraska or Marquette is considered the likeliest candidate to oppose a southern team.

HALEY, HOBIN WITH ALL-STARS

FACE NOTRE DAME ALUMNI

Eight players, who have made big names in Eastern college football circles, have been signed to perform for the Collegiate All-Stars against the All-Notre Dame eleven in Boston's first indoor football game in Boston Garden one week from tomorrow night.

The night announced by Joe Alvarez, chairman of the committee staging the game, are: Paul Pauk Princeton; Captain Joe Maniaci, Fordham; Jim Hobin, Holy Cross; Captain Red Fleming, Catholic University; Captain Joe O'Brien, Boston College; Captain Joe Christ, Northeastern; Bernie Rankin, Yale, and Bob Haley, Harvard.

Other players who starred on Eastern gridirons last year and during the season just ended have applied for places on the team.

Selections of other stars will be made and announced within the next few days, so the team can be organized and get in practice sessions.

The Notre Dame team has played and won five games this season. In the backfield are such greats as Frank Carideo, Bud Konar, Steve Banas and Marty Brill.

The game will be played on a dirt gridiron Chairman Alvarez today is negotiating for 400 truck loads of dirt.

After it is placed in the Garden it will be rolled and packed, and playing floor will be as smooth as an outdoor one.

The committee will meet today and select a coach for the Eastern Collegians. Another coach will be picked from this section of the country, one who is familiar with Eastern players, to whip the Notre Dame team through practice sessions its last few days.

JOAN TOZZER BACK

To Compete in Arena Frolic

By Will Connell

A little lady of the skaters' royal family does her steel-shod dance back into the spotlight as a feature of the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Boston Arena on December 14, one week from Saturday night.

She is 14-year-old Joan Tozzer, who won the national novice ladies crown two years ago. In a fall while riding the horse relied on the tiny miss, who sustained a fractured ankle, just before the start of last skating season.

REGAINS SKILL

Serious leg injuries of any kind usually end the career of a figure skater, who undergoes terrific body strain in going through the various figures. It seemed that Miss Tozzer's skating days were done.

But she had courage, and a youngster's disregard for accidents. Gradually her strength was built up, she traveled to England last summer and in company with several other Boston skaters spent week after week practicing.

Willie Frick, Skating Club of Boston teacher and noted exhibition skater, was instructor during the summer grind, and Miss Tozzer rapidly regained her old skill, then began to improve.

Now she's skating better than ever before, and will be a contender for the junior ice championship in the nationals, December 27 and 28.

POLLY, TOO

Speed skating races, novelty and clowns ice acts forming a circus on skates, Queen of the Frolic and other competition with attractive awards, are scheduled.

The annual ice fete will be the outstanding affair of its kind in Boston this year.

Lekang Skis at Garden

Anton Lekang, national amateur ski jumping champion in 1932 and three years Norwegian amateur champion, heads the list of straight ski jumpers at the National Winter Sports Exposition and Ski Tournament, to be held in the Boston Garden on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

In 1931 Lekang won the Eastern Canada ski jump championship at Lucerne, Que. with a jump of 237 feet.

He won the national amateur championship in 1932 at Lake Tahoe, Cal., and the same year he broke the record at Portland, Ore. with a leap of 204 feet.

GETS UP TO WIN

Amateur League

O'Boyne Wins At Lynn

The results of the other bouts: Frankie Smith, Bridgewater, defeated Ray Fitzsimmons, Lowell Technical K. O., two rounds; Dick Hogan, Charlestown, knocked out Eddie Clark, Lowell, first round; Speedy Atkinson, Lowell, defeated Billy Anderson, Boston, four rounds, decision; Patsy Flynn, Lynn, and Steve Sauchuk, Danvers, drew in four rounds, as did Dominic Colantonio, Walpole, and Sammy Tenore, Quincy.

Portsmouth, N. H. — Paul Rahanas, Everett, Mass., stopped Fred Moody, Durham, in first round. Moody's seconds threw in towel after Fred went down for the third time.

New York—Eric Seelig, 163½, Germany, stopped Mickey Walker, 174½, Rahway, N. J., in seventh round of scheduled ten. Walker's eye cut so badly referee stopped bout.

BUSINESS

Cold Weather Enhances Retail Trade

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University.)

New York, Dec. 3—Business news last week was distinctly cheerful. Industrial activity, as measured by the leading indexes, has risen close to the peak attained in the first New Deal inflation boomlet of mid-1933. With that exception, it is probably the highest since 1930.

Reports from the various sections of the country are more uniform, indicating that conditions are less "spotty." All sections report a good response to seasonably cold weather has been shown by retail trade, and signs of active holiday buying are general. An increase in building activity is reported on all hands.

Many observers are discussing possibility of a "let-down" in the early part of next year as a result of slowing up in automobile production between the artificial spurt this fall and the "natural" spring peak next May.

But this discussion is as yet somewhat academic, and even if the motor business has a lull, it is possible that the growth in building activity and other lines may offset it. And if PWA spending is supplemented by a Soldiers' Bonus distribution of some sort, it may well be that the demand for new cars will not show a little recession.

The steel industry last week continued to forge ahead in activity. Considering the season, it appears to have touched a new high for the year. One statistical organization, after making some allowance for the effects of the seasonal change caused by the earlier showing of automobile models, estimates steel activity at 80.4 per cent of normal a week ago, against 44.1 per cent a year ago.

Automobile production continued to climb, but more gradually, as the manufacturers have attained a level output nearly, if not quite, sufficient to take care of demand.

Statistically, this industry presents an interesting problem. It is now impossible to know what allowance should be made for the merely seasonal movement, and the significance of current levels of all production indexes is therefore in doubt. This fact, however, makes no difference in the outlook for the year, and some decline in the "indexes" later on should not be disturbing.

Lumber production showed some recovery and cotton cloth picked up as expected. Building activity spurted in most sections, and it seems probable that this great branch of industry will become the chief factor in further expansion.

Best of all, car loadings gained. While this was partly the result of increased coal shipments and the uncertain statistical measurements of the automobile and steel industries are a factor, it is a hopeful indication. Its continuance would be the most favorable symptoms that could occur.

Wholesale commodity prices reacted. A slump in the grains was chiefly due to a reaction from a preceding war-scare spurt, occasioned by renewed peace proposals made to Mussolini. Lard, cotton, silk and wool tops were also lower. But livestock and meats rose, and rubber, tin and cocoa were higher.

In general, there are enough financial and international uncertainties at present to make any considerable rise in commodity markets improbable. But the cost of living continues to climb gradually. (Shoes now seem to be slated for an advance.) In general, I agree with those who anticipate much higher price levels eventually.

Abroad, the Laval Administration in France received a new lease on life, and this brought some recovery in franc exchange. French political difficulties, however, are by no means over, and the crucial matter of approving the Laval Administration's economy measures remains to be settled.

State St. Gossip

One plausible explanation for the waning enthusiasm reflected in the stock market recently lies in the modified bullishness of certain investment advisory services.

While many dispute the claims that these views exert an important influence on the market, it is further explained that the trend began to show signs of tiredness a week or so ago, following the recommendation by one organization to reduce long positions.

The possibility of a more than temporary recovery in railroad income is becoming the outstanding strong point in the business and market situation. Certainly, the manner in which railroad stocks keep thrusting forward in the face of apathetic and reactionary tendencies in the general list suggests something significant is developing in the minds of investors to cause this right-about-face in market psychology.

The Street is still quite a bit mixed marketwise, with lots of bearishness about. Bulls argued that volume was getting smaller with irregularity, and that the trade reports were excellent from all parts of the country.

This is the big spending month, and some believe merchandising shares will reflect it. Many companies are looking for the best retail trade since 1929.

Some railroad observers are discussing the relative position of Illinois Central stock to the company's bonds, with the argument that either the stock is too high or the bonds too low or vice versa.

Dividend Changes

Favorable dividend changes in November, totaling 212, were more numerous than in any November of the depression, according to the Standard Statistics Co. Unfavorable changes, numbering 10, were fewer than in any other month of the depression, with the single exception of August, 1933.

BOSTON Firm Surveys OUTLOOK

FOUR FACTORS RULE TREND

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

The present business-financial scene may be briefly summarized under four headings, in the opinion of Paine Webber & Co., Boston brokers.

It remained for 1935, the firm says, to enunciate first signs of volume business acceleration, first visible in August carloadings.

Money Rates

Technical considerations form the basis for the third heading

"The market, by avoiding sharp concentrated advances and correcting itself almost continuously as it has progressed, is probably stronger than superficially appears," is the opinion of the Boston brokerage house.

While the doubling of volume over the past month and a half is looked on as not wholly welcome, the probability of any extensive market shakeout is doubted, unless touched off by some adverse news development.

Here Paine, Webber comment on the impossibility of exact prediction, adding, "A number of important court hearings are scheduled for December, with judgments due in January or February."

"European monetary or political developments may possibly be disturbing. It is in this area, rather than in economic fundamentals, that the strength of the securities markets might sooner or later be required to meet a test."

GOODALL CO. Earnings Given

Goodall Worsted Co. and subsidiary, Goodall Co., makers respectively of "Palm Beach" cloth, and "Palm Beach" cloth suits, report for 9 months ended July 31, 1935, net earnings of $441,416, equal to $5.95 per share on 74,147 shares of stock.

This compares with net profit in year ended September 30, 1934 of $302,358, equal to $4.08 per share, and with net profit in year ended September 30, 1933, of $446,961, equal to $6.03 per share.

NEED Of Farm Sop DENIED

BALANCED LIFE REALLY VITAL

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

New York, Dec. 3 (US)—A notion has gotten abroad, especially among business men, that the opposition party will have to devise an alternative to the AAA as a mere sop to the farmers.

This implies that fundamentally there is no need of keeping the major economic groups in balance.

A truer approach to the subject would be to analyse the nature of our complex economic life under the technology of the power age — the conditions which make it flourish normally, and the occasional disturbances which make it flourish normally, and the occasional disturbances which throw it out of kilter. Once this type of diagnosis were made, it would be possible for men's minds to deal with remedies which will really deal with the maladjustments.

Balanced Life

The problem is not farm relief, but the restoration of conditions of a balanced economic life.

It happened that in the recent depression it was the farm group which got violently out of balance. In a future period of short crops, it is conceivable that farm prices will be too high and industrial incomes in the cities relatively too low.

The problem of functional balance is to permit a maximum employment manpower in making goods and services for exchange. When the groups are compensated on something approaching a parity, they fully employ one another by interchanging the products of a year's labor.

But when these normal relationships are temporarily distorted by a disproportionate collapse of one group of prices, such as agricultural prices, the effect is to give rise to a group insufficient to become to acquire the products of the other groups. In the recent depression, farm income was largely sufficient to pay taxes and interest—not to speak of cash buying power for industrial products.

• • •

The effect in terms of manpower was similar. There were lots of work millions in the cities who are normally employed catering to farm people.

With a vastly reduced aggregate farm income, the amount received per farm worker was greatly reduced. But the mode of life was not taken away from the farmer.

On the other hand, as industrialists sensed the shrinkage of demand, unwilling to accumulate inventories down to lay off men and to withhold capital.

• • •

Since the rise in farm prices in the last two and one half years, resulting from a combination of an act of providence in the form of the drought, natural recovery and governmental policy, increased farm buying power put men back to work in the cities.

BIG CASH SUBSCRIPTION FOR:

TREASURY BONDS

Morgenthau Closes Books

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 3—The Treasury's books were closed today on its $900,000,000 financing venture. Full subscription in one banking day evoked expressions of "delight" from Secretary Morgenthau.

The bankers, their coffers overflowing with surplus cash, quickly took up the issues of notes and bonds designed to finance winter relief and give the government some pocket money.

With the loan, the public debt rose to $30,500,000,000, a new top.

The issues were $450,000,000 in 1¼ per cent notes and the same amount in 2¾ per cent bonds of 1945-47, and constituted the largest bloc of financing in a year.

In addition to this offering of securities for cash, holders of $418,000,000 in 2¾ per cent treasury notes maturing December 15 may exchange them for additional notes or bonds of the new issue.

With the new cash the treasury's working balance is expected to be about $2,000,000,000, unless there is a heavy outflow in the next couple of weeks.

Heavy gold imports and federal spending had resulted in a piling up of such reserves in the vaults of the Federal Reserve System members. Some experts attributed the inflow partly to this.

Success of the large issue, some officials said, indicated that the "auction" system of selling securities to the highest bidder would be confined to small issues. This system, protested by the bankers, first was used last summer.

In later August a government offering on this plan was underscribed for the first time. The plan was not used in selling the $900,000,000 issue.

They also argued that with bidders inclined to shade their bids, the market price level of previous government issues also tended to sag.

Transfer Taxes

New York State stock transfer tax in November totaled $3,790,782, against $3,012,555 in October and $1,281,527 in November, 1934.

Curb Market Irregular

The lack of aggressive buying retarded any sizeable recovery from early trading lows. Activity was at an extremely low ebb.

The specialty list improved somewhat. Bliss was a strong feature, netting ¾ point. Molybdenum, Montgomery Ward A, United Shoe Machinery showed minor gains.

ENGINEERING Awards Higher

Engineering awards for the short week including Thanksgiving Day total $41,863,000 as reported by Engineering News-Record, against an average volume per week to date of $28,222,000 and an average volume per week for last year of $20,165,000.

Heavy volume of state and municipal awards and higher private awards are responsible for the substantial high rate of putting work under contract.

This week's volume is made up of private awards, $7,772,000; public, $34,091,000, of which $3,662,000 is federal and $30,429,000 in state and municipal.

Bond Order

Peabody, Mass.—The City Council has approved of an emergency bond order for $8500.

FURNITURE Running Ahead of Last Year

Steel furniture orders and shipments this year have been running well ahead of a year ago. In the first nine months this year the average gain in new orders was 29 per cent, while the average rise in shipments was 25.2 per cent.

Orders, however, have registered a sharp upturn in the last few months, the gain in September, 1935, over September a year ago being 71.1 per cent.

Unfilled orders are considerably above a year ago, the total at the end of September being 46.4 per cent greater than on September 30, 1934.

Moreover, orders in the third quarter of this year were the largest for any three months since the first quarter of 1931.

The upturn in general business, especially in commercial and retail trade, is responsible for the steel furniture demand

Other factors are a revived demand from foreign countries and the advances made by American manufacturers in improving their products and thereby making obsolete equipment which, only a few years ago, was looked upon as likely to last for years.

NOVEMBER Gross Higher

While it is too early to forecast net, earnings for last month, it seems certain that the road will make a substantially better showing than for the like month of 1934, when a deficit after charges of $445,409 was shown.

The cash position of the road is steadily improving. Deposits in New York banks at present are sufficient to meet the road's interest charges through April 1, 1936.

This is outside of funds the road has in the West to take care of operating costs.

Large Trading

Transactions in stocks on the New York Stock Exchange during November totalled 57,429,773 shares, the largest November since 1929, when 72,454,600 shares were traded in and also the largest trading for any one month since July, 1933 when 120,271,243 shares changed hands.

FORBES Discusses SETBACK

HESITANCY NOT OMINOUS

By B. C. Forbes

Current hesitancy in the security markets should create no uneasiness. A temporary setback was long overdue. So far, it has been mild rather than severe. It is welcomed alike by bulls and bears.

When stocks go up and up and up without an occasional recession, an unhealthy situation is created, according to Wall Street's analysis. The "technical position," is it is professionally called, becomes vulnerable. Correction comes from a "shake out."

Notwithstanding the recent wobbliness, stocks ended November on a moderately higher level than at any other month-end in the last four years.

One compilation figures that the net average gain in stocks listed on the New York Stock Exchange during the month was 2.97. Another compilation covering 100 representative non-ferrous stocks shows that they increased in quoted value $764,017,000 last month, which was less than in October but more than twice the gain during August-September combined.

The fact that rails did best of all is interpreted by Wall Street as particularly gratifying, since they are historically regarded as more essentially investments than other classes of shares.

December usually witnesses a good deal of selling to establish losses for reductions from income tax statements. Although the law now stipulates that losses can be deducted only to the amount of $2000 in excess of gains, such selling may become fairly extensive inasmuch as quite substantial gains have been registered on issues this year.

Prevailing sentiment in the financial community still is that the long-term trend is likely to be upward.

• • •

With few exceptions utility corporations have turned thumbs-down on the "anti" law. The best legal talent in the country has practically unanimously found the act unconstitutional. Of course, it may be argued that such a ruling was desired by the engaging high-priced lawyers. Nevertheless, belief is very widespread that the Supreme court will find quite as much reason for vitiating this legislation as it found for vitiating NRA.

N. E. FIGHTS

To Save MILL Property

By Hugh E. Bradshaw

New England is not taking the permanent loss of her mill properties through razing with equanimity and there are indications that one state at least, Rhode Island, is going to do something to stop it.

Of late years mill owners with idle plants on their hands have thought it good business to raze them and save money. The offering at auction today, Wednesday and Thursday of two mills and equipment of two others by B. E. & R. Knight is one of the most important in recent years.

• • •

Rhode Island is not taking kindly to such developments and it is expected the General Assembly in January will receive a late statement message on idle properties. The reason is obvious. Once a mill is dismantled or torn down the community in which it is located suffers a permanent loss. Not only in labor loss but in basic wealth. The chance of revival when conditions improve is lost. New industries, which might avail themselves of an opportunity to possess the abundant water supply facilities and tap the ample reservoirs of skilled labor, look elsewhere when they make expansion plans

Note: Another side of the New England mill picture is presented by the Goodall Worsted Company of Sanford, Me. . . . Makers of trademarked light suitings . . . A new earnings jump is reported by the company for the 12 months ended July 31 in a statement today. . . Per share income of $5.80 is shown. This compares with $4.06 for year ended September 30, 1934 . . . And the stories we hear from all over say identical revival has only just begun . . . The shares of the company are available on almost a 10 per cent basis. . . . On current reported earning power . . . We have always been told 13 per cent was cheap.

• • •

The Dow-Jones industrial average has slipped under the 141 market. It seems definitely headed toward 138. Personally we would not care to see the lower price touched. It would herald a further decline, even though a technical recovery would be a nearby possibility. And once more the world seriously interfere with the chances of rails on the upside, which is the direction of our real market interest. Time, however, is nearby guideposts, and all we can say is, if the worst comes to pass in the industrial section the rails are entitled to dip to 36 on the Dow-Jones index.

• • •

Shorts: We present a list of industrial issues today that have given minor bear tips on the charts . . . They should be avoided pending formation of new bases . . . If owned the first rally should be used by liquidation at least part of holdings . . . Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, duPont, International Harvester, Libby-Owens-Ford, Western Union and Westinghouse . . . To these add American Can and Chrysler . . . Both of which have slipped our levels suggested for protecting commitments . . . All are high priced or highly speculative industrials which have consistently warned against following . . . The rails we note with satisfaction are missing.

STOCKS Close FIRM CASE UP MORE THAN 4 POINTS

New York, Dec. 3—Recoveries of fractions to 3 or more points predominated in today's active market, although the activity was comparatively small.

A little better tone to the Italo-Ethiopian war news was said to have inspired some short covering and replacements of recently liquidated commitments.

Shares of Case started more than 4 points and International Nickel, American Telephone and Western Union recovered 2 points or so each.

Among lesser gainers were U. S Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Deere, Montgomery Ward, Standard Brands, Phillips Petroleum, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Illinois Central, Loutey, Nashville, U. S. Smelting and Johns-Manville.

The rise in tone was firm.

Timely Events

The opinion seemed to be widespread in the commission houses that prices have generally been unreasonably depressed by the agitation laboring under the influence of European events to the neglect of fundamentals in the business situation at home

Continued activity in the automobile industry was interpreted as meaning the manufacturers do not anticipate that current buying resulting from bringing forward the motor shows will lessen sales during the normal distributing season from February to April

The decidedly favorable response to the treasury's December financing plans was seen in banking quarters as reflecting the belief that the government will continue to follow orthodox borrowing methods

Early estimates of last week's car loading figures indicated a sizable decline under the previous week's total. This was expected in view of the Thanksgiving holiday

Forecasts of further expansion in the heavy goods industries were strengthened with the announcement of the International Nickel Company that it is contemplating increasing its refinery capacity at a cost of approximately $6,000,000.

At the beginning of foreign exchange trading in London sterling was unchanged at 6.9314 cents and sterling was ¾ of a cent firmer at $4.93⅛.

Doremus & Co. Appoints Robbins

Gregory, Jacob Viner and other well-known economists.

At Williamstown he was also a member of the Institute Press Bureau.

World Gold Output

Seven-Year-Old Girl Foils Madman

Crazed Hitch-Hiker Clings to Speeding Car

By FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

And a very extra-special hello to you, Marybob Willson out there at your home at 1018 Stuyvesant avenue, Union, N. J., for your swell story today. I'm sending along your ten-spot and your Adventurers' Club membership right away.

Marybob—pretty name isn't it?—is a big girl now and going on 11, but she was only seven when adventure—in the shape of an escaped lunatic—jumped right on the running board of the family car and gave Mary a chance to be a heroine.

One autumn day in 1932 Marybob and her mother were driving, without her dad, from Erie, Pa., to New York city. That was a big thrill for Marybob—taking a long trip like that without her dad—because it gave her a chance to take care of her mother.

Marybob kept her eyes open, and, while her mother drove the car, she lolled luxuriously alone in the back seat like a little queen watching the scenery.

Old Man Autumn had been using his paint brush on the trees that line the road of the Roosevelt Highway in the part of Pennsylvania they were driving through and Marybob didn't miss a thing. Beautiful russets and yellows flew by in a moving picture of color as mother stepped on the gas to get into New York before dark.

Suddenly, however, as the car sped along the light traffic, a man jumped into the center of the road and gesticulated wildly for them to stop.

Thinking that there had been an accident around the bend ahead of them and that someone might be seriously hurt, Marybob's mother slowed down just in front of the man.

As she did so he dashed forward, jumped on the running board and began cursing and yelling like a madman.

"GO AHEAD, GO FAST, GO FAST," THE MAN SCREAMED BETWEEN CURSES.

Marybob and her mother looked at the man and Marybob's mother went pale. The man's eyes were starting out of his head and the muscles of his strained face twitched spasmodically.

At first she thought he was drunk, but a second glance at his wild, unnatural eyes, told her she had a dangerous maniac to contend with. The mother's first thought was for her little girl.

"Be careful," she said in a guarded voice, "this man is crazy."

"Faster!" he shouted, and, taking a screwdriver from his pocket with his free hand, he reached through the window and struck at Marybob's mother. He was on the driver's side of the car and could easily reach her.

In the meantime, in the back seat, Miss Marybob was doing a little heavy thinking. If she locked the door from the inside the crazy man would at least have to stay on the outside. Her little hand slipped down and zip! the lock was on the door.

So far so good. But now, how about closing the window on his hand? The maniac was giving all his attention to her mother, so Marybob was able to start turning the little handle that closes and opens the window. Little by little the heavy glass came up. If only the man wouldn't notice it until he was caught.

Marybob's mother was driving like mad now. The car was swaying back and forth across the road. Any minute she might lose control and send them all to their deaths in a terrible smashup.

The glass was soon just a tiny bit away from the man's hand. Marybob could see the blue veins standing out as the man held on with all his strength. She took a long breath, a tight grip on the handle and then turned it as fast as she could. The window pressed the hand tight in its grasp.

A wild scream of anger came from outside the car—a pair of murderous eyes glared through the glass at the little girl, but Marybob wasn't afraid now. She just held on tight to the window handle.

Her mother, nearly fainting from terror, saw a group of men in the road ahead. She dared not slow down and was afraid to look around because of the speed of the car.

Mama nearly lost control of the car and herself when she realized what her daughter had done, but she did slow down and stop. And Marybob didn't let go of the window handle until three men grabbed hold of the crazy man and pulled him off. Even then he swung his screwdriver at the window and smashed it to bits. But he didn't hurt Marybob or her mother.

HOLLAND

TWO Stage Successes Hit Broadway Line

By GEORGE HOLLAND

Affixing the possessive to the name of Abbott in this instance does not mean that the high-riding George is author of "Boy Meets Girl." Mr. Abbott is the producer this time. Samuel and Bella Spewack wrote the play.

George Holland

Although "Boy Meets Girl" has had insufficient time to establish itself as a real rival for its fore-running satire on the movies, "Once in a Lifetime," it is being hailed as a candidate for a year's run in the big city.

* * *

The past week produced two successes. "First Lady," which treats of Washington society among the politicos, is standing the customers up, and rolling those who obtain seats in the aisles.

First critical thoughts on "First Lady" were of the rave variety. Second thoughts tempered the first responses slightly, but they were still very enthusiastic.

George S. Kaufman, co-author of "Once in a Lifetime," is co-author also of "First Lady." Katherine Dayton, a newspaper writer, is his collaborator.

* * *

Gertrude Niesen, whose name is so frequently confused with that of Greta Nissen, (the blonde actress who has a real talent, too), will have so many admirers in the first-night audience of the Follies at the Boston Opera House Christmas Night, that Fannie Brice and Bob Hope will be surprised.

Miss Niesen's recent visit to town as headliner of a Keith-Boston show was a huge success. She made thousands of friends professionally, and her social gadding-about endeared the singer to hundreds others. And the young man who escorted her is really her father.

* * *

Boston is being treated to an example of high-pressure press-agentry by one of its masters in the theatrical field. In back of every line of newspaper reference, and lurking somewhere in the background when cartoonists and columnists find occasion to mention the title "Three Men On a Horse," is Joseph Flynn.

New Dancing Partner For Fred Astaire

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor Universal Service
Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 3—The Ginger Rogers-Fred Astaire combination has made money for the company and pleased the customers but Radio does not feel it advantageous for either Miss Rogers or Mr. Astaire to keep up the team indefinitely.

So next August, Freddie will have a new dancing partner and one that should be equally popular with the movie fans.

Louella O. Parsons

Graceful Harriet Hector who came here to play in "The Great Ziegfeld" has put her John Hancock on a contract which calls for her services at the radio studios in August. She will dance with the nimble - footed Astaire in a musical specialty to be directed by Mark Sandrich.

The welcome given Loretta Young at the 20th Century-Fox studio will do as much as anything to make her entirely well. Poor Loretta, who has been so desperately ill, made her first appearance at the studio and was given a welcome that must have done her heart good.

She will be able to return in a few weeks for actual work and her first picture is "Lightning Strikes Twice." Loretta has been off the screen for some months and for a time there was a rumor that she would never come back but it won't be long now before she is entirely well.

A bow to the English public is the new title of the Eddie Cantor picture which will be "Strike Me Pink" instead of "Shoot the Chutes."

Last week United Artists, according to the executives of the company, took in $900,000, the biggest week they have ever had and $500,000 of that amount came from England.

Since "Shoot the Chutes" is primarily an American title, the Cantor picture was rechristened at some little expense. Lew Brown owned the rights to the title, "Strike Me Pink," and whenever a title is in negotiation the prices go sky high. I am told the asking price was $5000, but the getting price was somewhat less.

Chatter in Hollywood: No visitor in years has been as enthusiastic over Hollywood as H. G. Wells. Nearly 200 people were invited to meet him by Charles Chaplin, at a tea at the Vandome. A few nights previous Charlie entertained at a small dinner in honor of the British author who says that he has no plans for leaving Hollywood but may remain here indefinitely.

Of course, should Wells make a picture here it won't be his debut for he wrote and supervised "The Man Who Could Work Miracles" starring Roland Young, a spectacle which deals with the destruction of the world.

Entre nous, I understand that Samuel Goldwyn is very eager to get Ruth Chatterton to play the Fay Bainter role in "Dodsworth." Ruth is hesitating, I hear it gossiped, because the woman is somewhat of a heavy. I'd like to see her do a picture with Sam Goldwyn, and he will undoubtedly make a good picture out of "Dodsworth," for which he paid $165,000.

I don't know whom he can get to play Walter Huston's role, for you can hardly think of the play without Huston. Perhaps Sam will be able to induce Walter to play the part in which he appeared for over two years on the stage.

Snapshots of Hollywood

MOVIE MIXUPS

NOW PLAYING AT RKO KEITH MEMORIAL THEATRE

Any "Annie Oakley" today?

It is superfluous to explain that the term "Annie Oakley" means free tickets in the parlance of the theatrical profession. If you wish a pair of guest theatre tickets, or cash awards or a 5 tube 1936 Automatic Tom Thumb radio you can have your wish.

Visit the popular RKO Keith Memorial Theatre where the screen attraction is "Annie Oakley" featuring three of the above drawn Hollywood stars. The remaining celebrity is New England's foremost organist who may be seen and heard, in person. Do you know them?

Identify all of the above "Movie Mixups" stars by unscrambling their names from the batch of mixed up letters near cartoon likeness. Today's is the second in this week's series. A new series begins every Monday.

To those submitting the best weekly solutions, in the opinion of the judges, a share of 40 Automatic Tom Thumb radios, made in New England by the Automatic Radio Manufacturing Company, of Boston; $150 in cash, and 300 guest theatre tickets are given FREE by the Boston Evening American.

A special grand award of the new 1936 Automatic Console radio with 20 features including all wave reception, nine all metal tubes, and "Vision Ray," the modern mechanism which actually "sees" station selections, is to be presented to the lucky person at the Boston Opera House by a cast of celebrities of the new 1936 Ziegfeld Follies.

Vaudeville At Bowdoin

Beginning tonight and each Tuesday evening thereafter vaudeville acts will be an added attraction at the Bowdoin. The pictures opening there tomorrow night are "Pursuit," starring Chester Morris and Sally Eilers, and the latest Wheeler and Woolsey comedy, "The Rainbow Makers."

Stage Vet Passes

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 3—Michael B. Comerford, 52, general manager of Comerford Theaters, Inc., which controls a group of motion picture houses and vaudeville theaters in northeastern Pennsylvania and lower New York State, is dead in a hospital here from injuries suffered in an automobile accident Saturday.

Major Bowes' Star Amateurs on Bill

Major Bowes' number one troupe of national prize winning amateurs, featuring the outstanding stars of his entire assemblage of talented performers, will open a personal appearance engagement on the stage of the Metropolitan Theater Friday in a brand new musical variety show.

Hobo, clerk, schoolboy, plumber, mechanic, caddy, newsboy, teacher and lumberjack are the occupations formerly held by the various members of the company now in search of a successful career in show business.

Major Bowes

Among the popular favorites of this sensationally successful troupe, selected by the popular vote of a nation-wide audience, are "Skeets" Simmons, the hobo who became nationally famous with his homely wit and philosophy obtained from his 30 years of hoboing around the world; the Youman brothers—Skippy, George and Jack—who created a sensation with their impersonations of the nation's foremost orchestras.

There are also Celeste Alvi, coloratura soprano, who will join the Chicago Opera next season; Michael O'Byrne, the Texas lumberjack with the golden voice; Alphonso Tomaino, the violin virtuoso; the Red Rank Hillbillies, three boys from New Jersey who play 30 different instruments, and McCormick and Herling, the novelty musical duo, who join the cast of a big Broadway musical revue at the close of their present tour.

The screen attraction, coupled with the appearance of this all-star cast of Major Bowes' prize winners, will be "I Found Stella Parish," starring Kay Francis.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

TUESDAY, DECEMBER 3, 1935

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Alien Agitators and Flag Insulters Should Be Deported!

A COMMUNIST audience is composed according to a definite recipe and is strictly regimented.

It is made up of pretty much the same people, whether the place of meeting is Union Square or Madison Square Garden, Columbus Circle or an East Side Casino.

A reference to the American flag, the Constitution, the church, the press, the schools —is invariably hissed.

* * *

WHERE names are published, whether of platform figures, sponsors, or those in attendance, they are found, with hardly an exception, to be ALIEN names.

This is not strange, as the audiences are more than ninety per cent made up of aliens, who are in this country by PERMISSION and UNDER SUFFERANCE.

The speakers always are notorious and mangy agitators—with a kink in their brains and hatred in their hearts—hatred for respectability, industry, independence—hatred of the competent American, native or foreign-born, who prefers self-reliance and self-support to the life of a panhandler.

These audiences are for the most part a rather dirty and seething rabble—yelling, cursing, abusive rioters and vagrants.

They know what is expected of them—an ovation for every treasonable word uttered by their speakers and a fisticuff brawl with the police if a pretext can be found. It gives the right atmosphere, so they think—an appropriate suggestion of the violence which goes with "class war."

* * *

THEY are a disloyal lot of ungrateful rascals —the scum of our melting pot and should be skimmed off and dumped on the scrap heap.

This country should not tolerate their disloyal activities another moment.

THEY SHOULD BE ROUNDED UP AND DEPORTED!

The insolence which these Communist and Socialist intruders displayed at their joint mass meeting at Madison Square Garden the other night is unsupportable.

They deliberately and designedly failed to show anywhere in the great hall one American flag—emblem of the liberty they abuse, and the equality and fraternity they seek to destroy.

In its stead, they flaunted their red rag emblem of blood and blasphemy, stupidity and savagery, the sign throughout the world of an ignorant political atavism, which would turn back progress and reinstate the outgrown social abuses and deformities of the past.

* * *

Think of it!

They are merely guests, unwelcome enough but nevertheless guests, of this nation, fattening at our board, stretching their lazy limbs on the soft couches of our liberality and prosperity, and they haven't the grace, not even the common decency, to respect and acknowledge the generosity of their host.

America is easy-going and has paid heavily for that amiable failing.

Her tolerance, however, is not inexhaustible. She has a temper and it can be roused.

To this odious scum of her population the familiar warning might be addressed—Beware the anger of a patient man—and, we might add, of A PATIENT NATION.

The demand that these undesirables should be rounded up and expelled from our shores is heard in all parts of the country.

Unless this Communist disrespect to America stops, and STOPS SHORT AND PROMPTLY, this feeling, which is so rapidly spreading throughout the land, will crystallize into a demand not only for the suppression of these treacherous and traitorous elements in our population, but for LEGISLATION, specific and effectual, TO COMPEL THEIR DEPORTATION.

It will not be a scattering demand, either, but the demand of a united America, speaking with one voice—the kind of demand that admits of neither answer nor delay!

* * *

THE country of the Pilgrim Fathers, of the patriots of 1776 and of the great host of Lincoln's Defenders of the Union will not brook a blatant parade of treason in our midst —treason spawned abroad and which still speaks its alien Communist hate for us in broken dialects, while it repays the kindness and the hospitality of free America with insult to its flag and intolerable offense to the conscience and patriotic sensibilities of all Americans.

Tax Gougers Busy

THE $17,455,000 tax program recommended by the special recess commission of the Legislature will find many an opponent throughout the Commonwealth.

Promise by the commission of $10,625,000 additional revenue for cities and towns and $6,830,000 for the State appears gratifying ON THE SURFACE to real estate owners and manufacturing corporations.

But there can be NO gratification in the commission's proposed revision of income tax exemptions to gouge two hundred thousand small wage earners.

Fourteen hundred dollars a year—twenty-six dollars a week—is no more than a living wage—even for an unmarried person. Not without vigorous protest will any man or woman pay a substantial portion of such a meagre income to the Commonwealth.

Nineteen hundred dollars a year—thirty-six dollars a week—is barely sufficient to maintain a comfortable home. Married couples in that income classification will find little merit in the commission's proposal to make them income tax payers.

Plans to place a dollar-a-year levy on each telephone and assessments on gas and electric current are interesting—especially the recommendation the charges be NOT passed along to the user. Perhaps, the commission possesses a magic wand that makes such a feat possible. But, nevertheless, there still exists a very strong possibility the public will be paying the dollar-a-year and the other levies in the form of INCREASED rates and maintenance fees.

Regarding tax exempt tangibles, the commission's report exercised great caution, although a little note was affixed to the effect that the Commonwealth MIGHT realize $160,691,250 a year by taxing them. This is a subject dear to the heart of Registrar Frank A. Goodwin, who made tax exempt tangibles a main plank in his gubernatorial campaign two years ago. His membership on the commission probably explains the subtle advocacy of such an assessment.

It would be impossible to cover so much ground as the commission did without pleasing SOMEBODY. The popular note in the otherwise gloomy report seems to be the call for an increase from 3½ to 10 per cent in the State's cut on the handle at dog racing tracks and a boost from 3½ to 5 per cent at horse tracks.

EVEN a casual study of the commission's findings is sufficient to convince anyone its members sought to effect tax relief by TRANSFERRING the burden from one group to another.

It is clear the commission, from the very beginning of its study, recognized the facts that the Commonwealth is TAX-DRAINED to death and that practically EVERY SOURCE of revenue has long since been tapped.

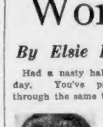
Cognizant of these truths, the members apparently continued their work on the assumption expenses WOULD NOT be reduced and proceeded to map a program that would make the ever-mounting costs of government fall on ALL shoulders.

A month hence the Legislature will be in session. Then the battle-of-the-century will begin. And the small wage earner, his very existence the target of the tax gouger, will be in the forefront of the objectors.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

Had a nasty half-hour yesterday. You've probably been through the same thing yourself.



Elsie Robinson

I was driving on a narrow, mountain road, not much more than a trail, when a hind wheel skidded and lost traction. There we were — hanging over eternity — whizzing frantically and getting nowhere.

Yes, of course — I should have had chains. I'd been warned. Or, lacking chains, a shovel. Best yet, kept to a safer road. And I had ample time to think of all that as I gazed air and tried not to swallow my tonsils. But those were certainly shuddery seconds scrambling about for grass, sticks, stones—anything to brace that whirling wheel.

Afterwards — bouncing thankfully home—I felt plenty philosophic.

How often, thought I to myself, I've handed myself just such a deal. Not in a flivver, but rambling along through life.

ALL IN LIFE'S MIRE

There you stuck, hour after hour, day after day—year after year, sometimes—in the same spot, your frantic mind going around and around in the same mad whirl. The same old thoughts, the same old tears and fears, over and over and over. The same old self-pity . . . slippery, slimy self-pity, with no solid, healthy substance that a clutching soul can grip!

JUST BRACE YOURSELF

Lost traction! That's had many a life stopped during these last four years. Maybe it has you stopped now. What's to do? Do what you do with your flivver —Find something to brace yourself.

Yes, of course, you SHOULD have had chains. Fortified yourself against such an accident—avoided risks, saved your money, kept a better road.

But who does? It's too late now to think over that. Besides, maybe you're going to profit more from this buggy ride than you ever would have by staying safe!

However, that pleasing thought, while comforting, won't put you back on the highway again. So get busy! Find a bracer—anything—anything solid—anything that will stop your whirling in dizzy circles and restore your aim, interest AND SELF-RESPECT.

Self-respect—that's the thing that holds you on the highway—keeps you out of the slime of self-pity. And work will give you self-respect. If you can't find a job, make one.

Work — study — friendliness—they'll all give you traction again. And, boy, traction is certainly a Grand Feeling after you've been looping the loop! Am I telling YOU!

Help Them to Reach Their Goal

Boston's annual Christmas Seal campaign has begun.

In view of the heavy task they must perform, the sponsors hope to make this year's sale the "most successful since 1929."

Tuberculosis continues to be a serious menace, in spite of the fact its death rate has declined.

The inroads of the white plague upon youth have yet to be checked.

In Boston there are the Prendergast Preventorium, where tuberculosis children receive care, the Sheltered Workshop for Men and Women an dthe dozens of free clinics throughout th city. Christmas seals make possible their existence.

YOU can help a sufferer toward health, or help to prevent someone from falling a victim.

New York Day by Day -:- O. O. McIntyre

New York, Dec. 3—Magazine editorships a few years ago fell only to the seasoned workers who had reached or passed a shade beyond middle years. Youth might write but it could not edit. Or so it was believed. But today the picture is vastly changed.

O. O. McIntyre

Young men are in the editorial saddle and riding hard. H. F. Burton of Cosmopolitan could play a juvenile role on stage or screen without a makeup.

Herbert Mayes of Pictorial Review is in his 30's. Alfred Dashiell, who pilots the veteran Schribner's, is not 35.

When Otis Wiese assumed editorship of McCall's he might have easily been mistaken for the head office boy. In the editor's chair his feet scarcely touched the floor. He was in his early 20's and is now but 31. The editorial staff of Esquire is largely youngsters.

Even George Horace Lorimer has begun to ease up and let his hand-picked younger men run things a bit. Sumner Blossom, of the American, is on the thither side of 40. And most of the pulps, the mystery, detective and love confession types, have boyish editors.

Newspaper work has always been tagged "a young man's game." I have long doubted it. I believe it to be a slick chunk or propaganda of the bosses to make striplings work.

To break a leg landing the story. The best writing, as W. R. Hearst often shows his staffs today, is done by the more mature. Also the most capable news direction. Youngsters excel chiefly in nimbleness.

When Arthur Somers Roche passed away suddenly two of his serials were running in important magazines. He had finished neither. His widow, associated closely with him in his writing, completed one so capably she was asked by a national weekly for a complete mystery novel at top price.

Four months later she had completed, had it accepted and was asked to do another. She is writing under the name of Ethel Petit, her maiden name, under which she authored two novels before her husband's passing.

Rosie, the pachyderm star of "Jumbo", is the idol of big company at the Hippodrome. During the long drawn rehearsals she proved herself the best of troupers, often working all night with stolid complacency. Her mahout is an Austrian who has served as her keeper for 13 years, sleeps in her pit nightly and walks her through the streets two miles a day for exercise.

Paul Whiteman, who has a way with elephants perhaps because he used to be one himself, is Rosie's favorite. She can always frisk him and find a tid-bit or so in his pockets. Rosie is a circus gal and has been around the world many times.

Bolce Du Bois is still another one of those names. Trill it several times and you'll find yourself off on a long mumble. Du Bois is one of the many Bob Davis discoveries when Davis, instead of gallivanting around the globe, stayed put as a magazine editor.

Rich Hail New Creed

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

The Rev. Doctor Frank N. D. Buchman arises in the Metropolitan Opera House in New York City, addresses an audience composed almost entirely of gentlemen in dinner coats or long tails and ladies bejeweled and bermined, and calls on the United States to give itself over utterly and entirely to God. In impassioned tones, he tells that smart Register audience that the the world is waiting anxiously to see what one nation can accomplish if it turns wholly and sincerely to divine guidance.

Edwin C. Hill

In his belief, the crying need of the world today is a spiritual rebirth. It is his hope, indeed, that the first grand spiritual awakening will take place in this country.

His listeners, many of whom had gone to the meeting from dining at Sherry's, applauded with well-bred but ample enthusiasm.

Here now, is an arresting evangelist—if one may apply that word to this extremely modern type of religious thinker. Dr. Frank N. D. Buchman is the founder and head of what is known as the Oxford Group. It is an active and forthright sect, disciples characterize it as working for righteousness with as much vim as the underworld works for evil.

SECT'S AIM BROADENS

Singular, indeed, has been the rise of this new sect of Buchmanism, named for the bulky, round-faced and be-spectacled Pennsylvania Dutchman who fathered it some 14 years ago. Dr. Buchman, whose celerity is now world-wide, first came to public notice as pastor of a Lutheran church at Overbrooke, Pa. In the course of his sermons he laid down a program of living based first upon personal salvation, then racial salvation, then national salvation and, finally, international salvation.

From Overbrooke and his Lutheran affiliations, the minister evolved a religious philosophy which developed into what has been known as Buchmanism. It grew severely jarred a number of times as it gathered momentum.

The late Dr. Hibben, president of Princeton University, decreed that there was no place in Princeton for Buchmanism, and suggested that Dr. Buchman himself might find other habitats far more congenial than the sims of old Nassau.

It has been asserted no religious movement since Wesleyism has created so many opponents or made so many friends as the creed of Buchman. It has been described as the reaction and revolt of modern youth from the irreligious and eat-drink-and-be-merry attitude of the aftermath years of the World War.

BUCHMANISM OPPOSED

Professors of Buchmanism have been denied licenses to preach in Protestant pulpits. A fairly recent case was that of Gordon T. Scoville, a Yale graduate and son of a well-known lawyer and writer, who was twice denied a license to preach in the Presbyterian church because he failed satisfactorily to answer the question: Do you seek a license to preach in order to gain standing in the Presbyterian church to further propagate Buchmanism?

The opponents of the sect decry what they call "soul surgery" employed in extracting confessions from prospective converts.

Buchmanism meetings are usually held in pretty swanky places—private homes of the well-to-do, de luxe hotels, exclusive country clubs and gilt-edged auditoriums. The creed, sect, philosophy—call it what you will—appears to have a specially strong appeal for ladies and gentlemen who still possess bank accounts.

Meetings in and around New York have been held in the Hotel Plaza, in Ratcliff Manor, in the Metropolitan Opera House and other places where hot polloi do not assemble ordinarily with ease and comfort. Opponents of Buchmanism object most violently to the open confessions extracted by this "soul surgery" business.

Dear Govt. -:-

By Winston Norman

NURSERY DEPT.
Wash., D. C.
Dear Dept.:

Will the Govt. pay I and my wife a Bonus for not haveing no babys this year? We haven't had none since little Millicent, aged 5, and the way I got the Bonus plan was from one of them Govt Relief Experts which comes around to our house.

This Expert is a lady by the name of Miss Jones, she is very fresh from college, so she knows all about How To Feed Your Children cheap, she read it in a book.

My wife Mabel don't like Miss Jones, she don't like to be told them kind of things.

So she says, "Oh your back again, are you? The Govt sent you to poke your nose in my cooking again, did they?" says Mabel.

"Now now," says Miss Jones, "you hadn't ought to be angry, the New Deal just wants to help you & be their Brother's Keeper."

That didn't seem to stop Miss Jones none, she is real nice, she went & told Mabel how to run her house, just like they do it in a book.

About ½ hour later I seen her to the door, & she says, "Goodby Mr. Norman, take care of your Relief Money and don't have a baby."

"I won't," I says, "and the same to you, Miss Jones."

Well, after Miss Jones had went away I set down on the sofa and thunk. All of a sudden I seen where the Govt. could help us Unemployed with a bonus for not haveing babys, because they pay the Farmer a bonus for not haveing pigs, don't they?

Pigs are pigs, but Babys are a Problem, on acct. the supply is bigger than the demand, & there isn't enough U. S. Jobs for our U. S. Babys when we have them.

Maybe you could fix it so as Not Haveing Babys was a sort of Boon-Doggling Projekt, or else you could call it Baby-Dogging if you wanted to.

I and Mabel will be looking in the Mail Box for our bonus, and we are

W. NORMAN & WIFE.
